Tonight's Episode: Play Nice!

The Megos are getting their revenge on me.

Y'see, when I was a kid, I had every single Mego doll ever made—including the now-pricey Hall of Justice and Wayne Foundation playsets. But I was one of those kids who, shall we say, tested the limits of the manufacturer. If I saw Batman and Robin racing down the streets of Gotham City in the Batmobile or Spider-Man swinging from building to building on TV...well damn it, they were going to do that on my block too!

I was like that evil kid Sid from "Toy Story." For realistic play, I would attack rockets of my own unique design to the backs of my Mego Superman and Captain Marvel to see which would fly the highest! (Unfortunately, Marvel was not the mightiest of mortals). Spider-Man would swing across the street and avoid traffic on a fishing line attached to a huge tree next to my house. The Human Torch became a real torch while plummeting to Earth after being attached to one of my flaming missiles. I even celebrated one Fourth of July with an all-out rocket assault on the Hall of Justice. I was the ultimate supervillain...and I'm sure my Megos shook in fear every time I gathered 'em up to play.

But that was then. Today it would seem that the Megos have the upper hand. I never imagined that when I became an adult, I'd be working for ToyFare, where my whole collection is now worth more than its weight in gold...that is, if it survived. If you listen closely you can hear my own screams of frustration every time ToyFare editor Scott Beatty tells me we need the Mego Spider-Man with Fly-Away Action for the latest whacked-out installment of "Twisted Mego Theatre." My Spidey crashed and burned. Or that I've gotta find a mint version of Captain America's Americar for a photo shoot. Sadly, mine was totaled by a Tonka. Or that I have to find the Wayne Foundation—once $29.95, now a cool grand—for a feature. If they only knew. I blew up that $1,000 sucker 18 years ago with a 50-cent cherry bomb.

If there's a moral to this story, it's this: When you get a new action figure, play with it, have fun, but DON'T blow it up and leave it melting in a pool of charred guck.

You might need it some day.

Now...off to find that Mego Daisy Duke...that one's on order from Mego Spidey personally.

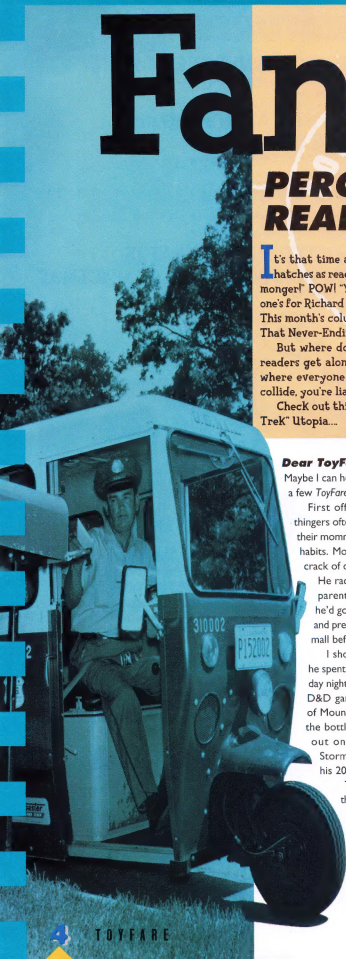
PERCEPTION IS REALITY

It's that time again! Time to board up the windows and batten down the hatches as readers line up to whip bricks at each other. "You're a greedy toy monger!" POW! "You're too lazy to find the good figures, feeb!" WHAP! "This one's for Richard Gere, jerk!" CRASH! Wait a minute—Richard Gere? You betcha. This month's column even invokes the hallowed name of—that's right—He of That Never-Ending Gerbil Rumor.

But where does all this dissonance come from? Why can't our beloved readers get along as one big happy toy family? Well, these are the 1990s, where everyone seems to live in their own little world. And when worlds collide, you're liable to catch a brick in the skull.

Check out this first diatribe, and you'll see why we ain't living in no "Star Trek" Utopia....



Dear ToyFare,

Maybe I can help you understand why a few ToyFare readers are so cranky.

First off, these twenty-somethingers often still live at home with their mommies to support their toy habits. Mommy wakes him at the crack of dawn as per his request. He races to his car (which his parents bought him in hopes he'd go out and look for a job) and prepares to race to the local mall before it opens.

I should also point out that he spent the prior evening (a Friday night) in a marathon 20-hour D&D game, drinking two-liters of Mountain Dew straight from the bottle. He may someday go out on a date but not until Storm Crow the Elf reaches his 20th level.

The store clerks see him through their windows. It's that guy again. The guy with the dandruff, black overcoat (in the summer!!!) and gut you could bounce an industrial Dumpster off of.

He barges in and makes a nuisance of himself and leaves empty-handed. Crazed, he heads to the local card/gaming shop to spin elaborate deals with the local Magic clique (the same clique that glares at you when you walk in the front door). The store manager accidentally turns on the fan and the dandruff blows about the room like a snow globe.

ToyFare doesn't need these scruffy, unibrowed weirdos reading your magazine or trying to pawn rare figures off on us at outrageous prices. Let 'em go do some live-action roleplaying in front of a bus.

Michael Jones
Woodland, CA

Hee hee. Storm Crow.

Dear ToyFare,

I am new to the phenomenon that is toy collecting and I just had a few questions:

1) I have an…interesting variant of Leia as Jabba's Prisoner from Star Wars: Power of the Force. Mine has—how should I say this?—nipples. I have only seen seven or eight figures since their release, but this is the only "Breast Enhanced Leia" I have seen. Have you heard anything about this oddity? Is it going to be worth a small island? Not that I would sell it if it were.

2) Do you think Todd McFarlane would consider doing a Green Bay version of Spawn? He could call it "Cheeseburger Head Spawn."

Mitch Hale
Tampa, FL

1) Just a few months ago, a reader wrote in about his Ninja Psylocke figure, who was sportin' a pair of inverted nipples. It's a production glitch, not a legitimate variant, and therefore worth less than a normal Slave Leia. All this nipplage is making me suspicious, though. Could this be part of a larger conspiracy?

2) Funny. But since Toddy Mack's such a sports geek, I thought I'd run the idea past McFarlane Toys Collector's Club Director Chet Jacques. "Well, we already did a Viking Spawn," Jacques mused. "So I guess Todd's allegiance is to Minnesota." Oh well. It's not like a Brett Favre toy would stand much of a chance against Violator.

Dear ToyFare,
As an enthusiastic collector, I am pretty much devastated. I recently saw Richard Gere on "Oprah," and he talked about the slave labor China uses to make its toys. "Made in China" can be found on the backs of all the action figures I've collected. These claims are totally discouraging me from purchasing any new figures.

Rose Mary Santiago
Rmsntgo@aol.com

This is one of those gray areas where no matter what position you take, everyone's miserable.

Richard Gere has long opposed China's occupation of Tibet. He's allied with the Dalai Lama. He has a hard and fast opinion that the Chinese government is evil. And he makes some valid points.

The Chinese government, on the other hand, is naturally of a different mind on the subject. They'd tell you that the Chinese people are working for low wages, sure. But the cost of living is low in China, so there you go.

Companies using Chinese labor would defend their stance with yet another position—it's the only way to keep their products affordable.

Who's right? Who can say? By boycotting Chinese-made products, are you helping to put an end to exploitation of China's poor? Or are you taking food out of the mouths of Chinese workers?

Nice, eh? Five paragraphs later and things aren't any clearer. Reminds me of my college term papers.

Dear ToyFare,
Did Joe Madureira design the X-Men: Ninja Force line?

Travis Heckel
Louisville, KY

When tracked down at his Long Island home, Madureira enlightened us with the following response: "No." Thanks, Joe baby.

Dear Toy Value Determinators,
I've read your ongoing debates between toy hoarders and toy enjoyers, and Jack must speak.

I have a 7-year-old son who loves action figures, but it will not kill him if he doesn't get that short-haired Robot Fighter Storm. He doesn't even care! The only ones who do are us grownups who need to complete a collection, to play with or to jack up the price and make a few bucks. It's about us, not the kids. My son is just as happy with that Leader figure that's been on the shelf for six months. Well, maybe not as happy. But he'll live.

Jack Yount
Fort Lewis, WA

Son: "Daddy, I don't want Leader! I want Storm!"

Jack: "You'll live."

Son: "But..."

Jack: "Jack has spoken."

Son: "When I get my driver's license, I am so outta here."

Dear FanFare,
Recently I went to Toys R Us and saw the new Extreme Ghostbusters action figures and bought Egon. Since this is a new line of toys, is it collectible?

Marco A. Munguia Jr.
Norwalk, CA

This might sound like one question, but Marco's actually asking three. "Is it collectible?" breaks down like this:

1) "Will it be worth a lot of money someday?" Probably not. It's a small enough line that it'll command about as much in 10 or 20 years as the Real Ghostbusters line from the 1980s commands today. Five bucks loose, maybe $20 in package.

2) "Are other collectors interested in this line?" The Ghostbusters line has a sizeable fan base—obviously, if figures are still being made nearly 14 years after the first movie. It's not, however, a very rabid fan base.

3) "Will I be sorry if I spend a lot of scratch on these toys?" If they're an investment, probably. If you buy 'em 'cause you dig the Ghostbusters, nah.

ToyFare,
I'm sure collectors out there have girlfriends who just don't understand our passion for collecting toys. Dragging them into Toys R Us is like taking us to the opera. Well, one day while I was examining the ever-so-popular Star Wars figures, my girlfriend wandered off to look at kiddie backpacks. For some unknown reason, she unzipped the latch of a Little Mermaid backpack and inside was a secret little stash! Hiding inside were Nien Nunb, EV-9D9 and Yak Face! Yep, all three brand new figures stashed away by some sneaky soul, all for me! Boy was my girlfriend excited! I think she was more excited than me! What a find!

Well, the moral to the story is to make sure you find a girl who can share this exciting hobby with. Remember, two heads are better than one and with this attitude you'll be sure to find some pretty cool toys.

Mike Tanis
Hammond, IN

I'm printing this letter for one reason and one reason alone, and it sure ain't as a tip for findin' Star Wars figures stashed in Disney merchandise.

ToyFare quite literally gets, no exaggeration, a billion letters a month. And as the guy who reads every single one of 'em, I've drawn the following conclusion: Male toy collectors will use ANY excuse, any at all, to mention their girlfriends.

Perhaps it's insecurity. Perhaps toy fans, consciously or not, feel a bit defensive about their interest in what's principally a kids' medium.

That's what I told Neve Campbell at dinner last night, anyway.

Dear ToyFare,
In response to your "Girl Power!" feature in ToyFare #3:

Don't you think they should make a more realistic figure, such as one that screams and yells when you go out with your Survey Says...

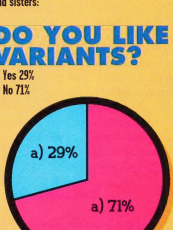
TOYFARE'S AOL POLL

Ahh, variants. They're the spice of every collection, whether it's a Spawn repaint or that special R5-D4. Or are they? To some, variants are maddening annoyances, keeping collections from being truly "complete." Now, when we say "variant," we mean repaints of the same character (like gold deco on a Clown II figure) or little stuff like long and short lightsabers in Star Wars: Power of the Force. Y'know? Not like a repaint of one Spider-Man figure into Captain Universe Spidey or whatever. So we asked our online brothers and sisters:

DO YOU LIKE VARIANTS?

a) Yes 29%
b) No 71%



Although it's clear lots of collectors dig variants ("It's the thrill of the hunt! And some repaints end up looking better'n the originals!"), over two-thirds of our loyal AOL respondents came down squarely on the "no more variants!" side of the fence.

And their reasons were plenty:

"You can't find them!"

"Variants for no reason are stupid!"

"Like rainbows, variants are the nibble inside of my ass."

"It's the end of toy collecting as we know it."

"Perhaps I'm just bitter because I'm paying Todd McFarlane's children's college tuition!"

Whew. Guess that's decided. Anyone want this theatre promo Jedi Luke?

Oh, thought you might. •

HEY! more reader mail...

friends? Maybe she can have a voice chip:

"Don't you love me anymore?"
"Do you think I'm fat?"
"Do you think I'm pretty?"
You guys get my point, right?

Matt Mathis
Haxlet, NJ

In 1987, when "Married...with Children" debuted on the Fox network, we all knew there'd someday be a price to pay. Apparently, that day has arrived.

Dear ToyFare,

The batteries for my Spawn III figure appear to be irreplaceable. Is this true? If so, why would they do that?

Richard Speakman
Yuba City, CA

It's true, all right. Here's McFarlane Toys' merry prankster Chet Jacques with the lowdown: "The only way to get the batteries out is to split the figure in half," Jacques explains. Ouch. "Have we learned from that? Yes. The new light-up movie figures have replaceable batteries." So don't be goin' hog wild with that Spawn III, Richard! Savor the pretty lights.

Dear Funky Toy Gods,

I'm in my room playing with my action figures, Captain America has just been defeated by Doctor Doom and Iron Man is coming to his aid, when I start thinking about how great it would be if one of the many toy companies made some civilian action figures. I think that would be beyond swell. You could have an entire collection of innocent bystanders, from Jim the Accountant (with arm-losing action) to Grandma Helen (with purse-swinging action.)

Also, why does Toy Biz make little, five-character subdivisions of their Spider-Man and X-Men lines? They used to have one big X-Men toy line. Now they've broken it up into Water Wars and Missile Flyers. How come?

Nick Peters
Cameron Park, CA

According to Toy Biz product manager Jesse Falcon, civilian action figures would go over about as well as "Murder, She Wrote" figures. "They just don't sell," he says, although he notes that the Toy Biz Famous Covers Aunt May is technically a civilian, as well as the J. Jonah Jameson head on the Chameleon figure. While we're thinking of it, the Mary Jane and Peter Parker figures are pretty civilian-looking.

As for breaking the large figure lines into smaller, self-contained assortments, "The less characters per assortment, the more assortments and different lines we can do," Falcon explains. "That's how we can do an all-bad guys line or an all-female line."

Dear Toy Gods,

How is Figrin D'an pronounced?

Brandon McGarity
Waycross, GA

Ignore the apostrophes and your life'll be a lot simpler, B'randon.

Dear ToyFare,

On my weekly Friday trip to Toys R Us for Star Wars toys, I was lucky enough to find the Snowtrooper and the Emperor's Royal Guard. I picked up two of each; one to open and one to keep.

I met this guy who had been there for four hours waiting for this stuff. Since I got the last of the new toys, he asked if I would share with him. I thought about it and said okay. He said if I met him in the parking lot he would give me a free toy I didn't have.

Out in the parking lot he gave me an exclusive 12-inch AT-AT Driver doll for free! So here's a lesson for everyone: If you're nice and share, good things will happen to you. Remember, the Toy Fairy is watching.

Ben Dotson
Chattanooga, TN

What a beautiful story. But remember, kids: If someone claiming to be the Toy Fairy promises to give you a treat in the parking lot, it's always best to run first and ask questions later.

Dear ToyFolks,

1) When stores stock Malebolgia action figures, do they realize they're selling a Satan toy?

2) How much did Mego toys retail for in the '70s?

3) Who would win in a fight between Hanson and the Spice Girls?

Zach's Backyard

Every month, one letter will be answered by Zach Malamute, official ToyFare spokesdog and America's favorite Malamute for four years running!

Heather Ray Photography

Dear ToyFare,

My dad took me and my brother Jason down to the Orlando Mega Show in September. We found the Jabba the Hutt/Han Solo two-pack there, and of course they were selling it for over what it cost them, but that didn't matter because we'd been waiting for it for a long time. So we shelled out $20. But when we got home and opened our long-awaited toy, we realized that we had been ripped off! The dealer had replaced the Jabba figure with an OIL FILTER! And to rub it in our faces, the guy wrote in the box, "Stupid [bleep]s! Should have checked what's inside, [bleep]holes!"

I just want to know what kind of a person would do such a thing to another person.

It like old saying, "Caravan emperor." That mean "Sucker born every minute." Life funny that way. Life not always what Zach expect, either. Zach expect squirrels to be crunchy and full of nuts. Squirrels not. Zach expect cat across street to see John's car. Cat not. Life funny. Funny funny.

1) Shhh. Of course they don't.

2) According to Mego megalomaniac John Bonavita, author of Mego Action Figure Toys, the first wave of the World's Greatest Super-Heroes! line in 1972 sold for ridiculously low prices. "They could be found for as low as $1.79 at certain discount stores," Bonavita says. "After the first year, they went up to $1.99, then to $2.19, and they kept going up from there. By the time Mego went out of business [in 1982], the toys were in the five-dollar range."

3) This one's easy. The Hanson brothers are kind, considerate Christians who perform wholesome, innocent tunes. The Spice Girls are depraved nymphettes bent on world domination.

Easy Spice victory? You'd think so! But the Spice Girls are also British. If I remember eighth-grade history correctly, the British are best known for getting their asses handed to them by a bunch of American colonists with about three rifles, a big stick and a slingshot between 'em.

Gotta put my money on Hanson.

Dear ToyFare,

I'm tired of stores with only old crap! Every time I look for a new Star Wars toy all they have is Yoda and Luke. Why can't the stores have a section for new toys? This sucks sucks sucks sucks. I mean, what's with this? It sucks.

And so goes life in Chiliwack.

As for life in Congers, it's time to put "FanFare" to bed for another 30 days. Whew. See ya next month.

ASCENSION TOYS LIFT OFF

It was only a matter of time.

Next year, the war between the Dayaks and Mineans will leap off the page and onto blister packs, as Ascension becomes the latest Top Cow Comics property to get the toy treatment.

Co-created by Dave Finch and Batt, Ascension took off like a bullet last September, landing in the Top 10 with its debut issue, and generating plenty of buzz with fans who were wowed by the book's incredibly dynamic art and intriguing storyline.

"I'm very excited about what we're going to be doing with the Ascension toys," Finch said. "Basically, I want something that I would want to play with, and that's definitely what we're working on providing. I know I can't wait to get mine."

Already familiar with translating its comic book properties into toys, Top Cow felt sure that Ascension would be up for the action figure market. Sure enough, when Ascension #1 hit the stands, the phones started ringing. Shortly thereafter JAKKS Pacific Inc., which manufactures World Wrestling Federation figures and Road Champs die-cast vehicles, had signed on to turn Ascension into a line of highly detailed toys.

Top Cow's Director of Marketing and Promotions, Kate Sherwood, assured fans that the Ascension toys will be true representations of the characters in the book. "We're very proud that Dave and Batt will be heavily involved in this project," Sherwood said. "Top Cow prides itself on the control our creators have over the properties, and we're doing everything in our power to make sure that the Ascension toy line is true to the characters, the comic, and the vision of the creators."

No word yet on who will be in the first wave, but count on Ascension characters Andromeda, Lucien and the nasty Gregorieff to make the cut. Look for them in September 1998 during Top Cow's "Ascension Month." ■ Matthew Brady

TREK ON THE EDGE

Kirk and Spock in flannel?!?

November saw the release of Playmates' 9-inch Collector's Series Captain James. T. Kirk and Mr. Spock from the classic "Star Trek" episode "City on the Edge of Forever." The Kay-Bee exclusive figures coincide neatly with the newly released edition of sci-fi guru Harlan Ellison's original script for the episode, now in bookstores, and are each limited to 6,500 pieces.

Playmates' Star Trek Product and Brand Manager Chris Overley hinted that next year could bring a third "City" figure—a 9-inch Edith Keeler (based on original episode star Joan Collins), with a brand new sculpt, ta boot! Fans and Ellison himself are already ga-ga over the standard-sized Edith Keeler action figure, currently on sale.

Also in November, Playmates released the Spencer Gifts exclusive Picard and Riker 9-inch Collector's Series figures, each limited to 7,500 pieces. ■ Tom Root

M.A.C.'S WITCHY WOMEN

Hey, check it out! Last month, ToyFare offered you a first look at Moore Action Collectibles' new Sara Pezzini Witchblade action figure from its forthcoming assortment centered around Top Cow Comics' mega-popular Witchblade comic series. Well, ace sculptor Clayburn Moore has already completed Medieval Witchblade and Ian Nottingham, and here's your first chance to take a gander at 'em! These figures will hit comic book and hobby stores in the first quarter of '98, with the addition of the seafarin' Anne Bonny Witchblade (from Tales of the Witchblade), the final figure in the assortment. Keep readin' ToyFare for more news from M.A.C.! ■ Tom Palmer Jr.

BOND...JAMES BOND

James Bond is back, in more ways than one.

This winter, Exclusive Toy Products is offering up the first James Bond action figure in 18 years (if you exclude Hasbro's 1992-93 James Bond Jr. offerings—and who wouldn't?). "James Bond has universal appeal," explained Reg Brack, Exclusive Toy Products vice president of licensing and new business development. "In fact, we think he has global appeal." To capitalize on that popularity, ETP has worked up a line of action figures with removable cloth clothing, offered only through Toys R Us.

What better place to start than the first Bond movie, "Dr. No"? Look for 6 3/4-inch versions of Sean Connery as Bond, the diabolical Dr. No and the unforgettable Honey Ryder (played onscreen by sex symbol Ursula Andress). From the 18th Bond flick, "Tomorrow Never Dies," (hitting theaters December 19) Exclusive is offering Pierce Brosnan as Bond, along with heroine Wai Lin, played by Michelle Yeoh, and baddie Elliot Carver, played by Jonathan Pryce. Brack also reports that "The Spy Who Loved Me" and "Goldfinger" are the next Bond installments on the plate, as well as a Bond Girls line, offered through Diamond Distributors. We can't wait for the Pussy Galore action figure.

One of Exclusive's other popular licenses, Babylon 5, is also picking up steam in December. In conjunction with WB Toys, ETP has created a line of 6-inch B5 action figures. The first wave includes Captain Sheridan, Ambassador Delenn, Ambassador G'Kar and Londo, each with sculpted clothing.

And rounding out Exclusive's new offerings is Best of the West, a line comprised of characters from popular TV Westerns. Look for 9-inch versions of William Conrad as Marshal Matt Dillon from "Gunsmoke," Robert Conrad as James West from "The Wild, Wild West" and Clint Eastwood as Rowdy Yates from "Rawhide," the only licensed figure ever made of the legendary actor. ■ Tom Palmer Jr.

CHIODO'S HOT GIRLS IN PLASTIC

What bloodthirsty Bad Girl is next up on the Skybolt Toyz list of figures?

Try Jungle Girl and Bikini Babe, the first in a series of female action figures that capture the art of Gen[13] colorist and acclaimed Good Girl painter Joe Chiodo.

"Initially, the guys at Skybolt Toyz saw the Art of Chiodo trading cards that came out through WildStorm, and liked them enough to approach me about doing action figures of the girls," Chiodo said. "I was hesitant at first when we picked out the characters to do, but I got really excited after I saw the initial sculpts, and that turned into euphoria when I saw the pictures of the prototypes. I really didn't expect them to capture my art as well as they did, and be of such high quality."

Chiodo's Bikini Girl and Jungle Girl in PVC (top) and pencil and ink (right).

But are Chiodo's gals ready for action? Skybolt Vice President of Marketing Steve Zyskowski explained the difference between the Chiodo figures and Skybolt's other releases. "These aren't articulated figures," Zsykowski said. "These are sculpted figurines, like our CreeD figures, that capture Joe's art perfectly. We know that a lot of people may have some pretty negative perceptions about sculpted figurines after some pretty poor representations of characters in PVC have come out, but trust me, these figurines are just incredible."

The Girls of Chiodo Series I includes two classic Chiodo girls: Jungle Girl, a rainforest princess; and Bikini Babe, a stunning supermodel caught in a pose for a swimsuit calendar.

"One of my reasons for doing the figures is that as an artist, it's great to see your work in many different forms, and on many different products," Chiodo said. "It's a really cool feeling to look at something that sits on a shelf and say, 'Hey! I designed that!' "

Look for two-packs of the Girls of Chiodo Series I to hit store shelves in the latter half of 1998, and retail for $14.95. ■ Matthew Brady

FULL MOON RISING

There's only one thing better than demonic killer puppets.

MORE demonic killer puppets.

Full Moon Toys has announced the addition of several more characters to its family of Puppet Master action figures, based on the popular line of direct-to-video horror films.

The drill-headed Tunneler and evil Totem, both over 7 inches tall, join previous Puppet Master toys Blade and Six Shooter in February, with Leech Woman and Pinhead arriving in April.

And there's more to come. "We plan on two releases every 60 days starting in February," said Rick Phares, executive vice president of Full Moon Toys. "[Blade and Six Shooter] were a huge success for us."

Tunneler, who comes with a machine gun and pickax; and Totem, packaged with a "Power Gem" accessory; will be the first figures Full Moon Toys will release without Palisades Toys, who partnered with Full Moon on the first pair of Puppet Master characters.

Phares said Full Moon Toys' action figure roster will soon expand beyond the "Puppet Master" films. The vampire Radu from the "Subspecies" films, one of the most-requested fan favorites, will join the Full Moon roster in June, available with smaller Subspecies "bendies."

Characters from "Demonic Toys" and "Trancers" are also under consideration, Phares said.

Joining Radu in June will be the gigantic 12-inch Puppet Master character Decapitron, whom Phares emphasized will be in scale with the other toys. Decapitron will sport four different weapons heads, one with the head of the "Puppet Master" himself, André Toulon.

For now, Full Moon plans to stick with company properties, Phares said. "We have a wealth of characters and old standards," he said. "But my eyes and ears are always open to new ideas." ■ Tom Root

ANTARCTIC PRESSES ON

He'd pull the Easter Bunny's ears off.

There's a new king of the rabbit hutch in town, and he's hopping down the toy trail next year. Antarctic Press has snared the action figure rights to bunny samurai Usagi Yojimbo, based on Stan Sakai's Dark Horse comic book of the same name. The Usagi figure represents a high-profile independent property in an increasingly diverse Antarctic lineup.

Usagi has been cast in plastic once before, as part of Playmates' Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles toy line. "The [Ninja Turtles] figure was more of a He-Man, muscle-bound Usagi," said Antarctic Vice President Joe Dunn. "The new figure is designed and colored by Stan. It's his vision of the action figure."

Antarctic's addition of the Usagi license firms up a crowded action figure schedule in the upcoming year for the San Antonio company. Along with the long-eared adventurer, Antarctic has announced plans for at least one figure based on V.T. Hamlin's classic Alley Oop comic strip.

Along with Usagi Yojimbo, set for a June 1998 release, and Alley Oop, scheduled for July, Antarctic plans a roster of new figures based on the company's comic titles.

The OVA (Original Video Animation) Warrior Nun Areala figure ships Dec. 29, followed in Feb. 28 by Cheetah from Fred Perry's cult fave Gold Digger. In April, Warrior Nun villain Lillith ships, as does the Leather Jacket Shotgun Mary variant.

Antarctic has also announced plans for a 12-inch Luftwaffe Pilot from the company's Luftwaffe 1946 title. Dunn said the Luftwaffe Pilot represents Antarctic's attempt to enter the much-coveted 12-inch collector's market currently dominated by Barbie and G.I. Joe. Dunn said the World War II-era German pilot will be more detailed with a lower price point than other 12-inch collector's dolls, with a guaranteed historical authenticity. The Luftwaffe Pilot will ship in two versions: a regular figure and a deluxe version with accessories.

Other possible Antarctic characters making the jump from printed page to articulated plastic could be the protagonist from former Rob Liefeld collaborator Brian Denham's new project, tentatively titled American Woman, or Itchy Koo from the company's flagship title Ninja High School.

Dunn describes the company's approach in 1998 as "cautiously aggressive." With the addition of the new properties, he feels Antarctic products will soon transcend the direct market, eventually achieving mainstream distribution in chain stores like Toys R Us and Wal-Mart. "I feel like we have a diverse lineup," Dunn said. "It's not based on one type of character; it goes beyond the Bad Girl and muscle-bound superhero types."

And there's no danger of competitors hopping on the rabbit-assassin bandwagon, that's for sure. ■ Tom Root

IN THE SPOTLIGHT

X-WOMEN TAKE CREATIVE LICENSE

Creative License, noted for its cold-cast porcelain adaptations of classic Marvel Comics characters, continues its line of X-Men related statues with two new additions in time for Christmas. First up is the all-new Psylocke cold-cast statue, approximately 10 inches high, depicting the popular mutant character battling in the X-Men's Danger Room.

"The Psylocke figurine is one of the most dynamic and daring pieces we have produced so far," said Bonnie Berryman, president of Creative License. "Dean Musson, the sculptor of this piece, has once again [shown] his expert sculpting capabilities."

The sole companion piece to Creative License's Bishop statue (released in July 1997), Psylocke, unfortunately, marks one of the last remaining Marvel releases from the company. Applause will be the sole producer of Marvel sculptures for the foreseeable future. But for X-fans, as well as collectors of high-end comics merchandise, this is the perfect addition to any toy shelf. Look for Psylocke at all comic distributors or ask 'em to order it for ya. Each Psylocke cold-cast statue retails for approximately $175 and comes with a signed and numbered certificate of authenticity.

Also on tap from Creative License in time for the holidays is an X-themed Christmas Tree ornament devoted to fellow X-character Storm! Arriving in December, the Storm ornament depicts the heroine in a flying pose, and sports a suggested retail of $30. It comes with with a signed and numbered certificate of authenticity. ■ Kathy Kane

TOYFARE TRENDSETTER

MUPPETS TONIGHT

Take a nap, Ernie!

He sings himself to sleep and snores, and he may just be the hottest thing out there this holiday season. Following up on last year's huge holiday success of Tickle Me Elmo, Tyco's Sing & Snore Ernie is already in extremely short supply in toy stores across the country. "Basically, Ernie is tracking at twice the pace that Elmo was last year at this time," Tyco's Account Supervisor Ellie Bagli said. "It's just phenomenal. We all figured that the success of Elmo was a once-in-a-career event. To think that it can happen two years in a row is just incredible."

Many parents were reportedly grabbing Ernies off store shelves as early as late September in order to avoid the madhouse that resulted from last year's Elmo craze, and with good reason. Many stores had already sold out of Ernie, who sings "Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star" before falling asleep, and were signing parents up for upcoming orders by early November.

"Our initial production projections for Sing & Snore Ernie were based on the numbers set by the phenomenal success of Tickle Me Elmo and we prepared for this year by setting production at an even higher level, even though Ernie is a more difficult and time-consuming product to manufacture," Bagli said. "Last year, we produced and sold one million Tickle Me Elmo dolls through Christmas. This year, in the face of the incredible odds that we might possibly repeat the phenomenon, we did our best to be prepared by manufacturing 1.2 million Sing and Snore Ernies."

And in a twist familiar to action figure collectors, a few toy stores in the New York area reported that many people are buying multiple Ernies with the hopes of selling them closer to the holidays to desperate parents at a significant mark-up. The best advice Bagli has for snagging a Sing & Snore Ernie? "Get it now," Bagli said. "Don't wait. Just grab one-now." That and start practicing those stories about how Santa sometimes delivers toys in late January if you're really, really good. ■ Matthew Brady

Ernie sings himself to sleep...and snores. Slacker.

JLA: JUSTICE LEGOS OF AMERICA?

He's a Lego maniac!

Kudos to California teen Tim Harding for this innovative look at some classic superheroes. People have been customizing action figures for years, but it just takes a little spark of creativity to get noticed.

Case in point: Most customizers take big-sized action figures and tear 'em apart to make new ones, but Tim here went teensy-sized and doctored-up his Lego collection to recreate DC Comics' venerable superteam, the Justice League of America. Not only that, Tim pitted them against a big honkin' robot Constructo. There's nothin' like seeing an itsy-bitsy Green Lantern openin' a can of whup-ass on a giant robot.

So now the call goes out to all action figure customizers to get creative. And don't forget to send photos of 'em to ToyFare's "Homemade Heroes" department. ■ Tom Palmer Jr.

TOY OF THE MONTH

DECEMBER'S coolest action figure...LOKI!

Who: Loki, half-brother of the Avenger Thor, and one of the Thunder God's main villains. Loki's a thoroughly evil dude. He's created baddies like Mister Hyde, Cobra and the Absorbing Man, turned Thor into a frog and it's even been said that he'll be the one leading the armies of evil when Ragnarok (the destruction of the Asgardian gods) comes 'round.

What: Look kids, it's the first Loki action figure, part of Toy Biz's collector-aimed Avengers line! The God of Mischief is joined by Thor, Scarlet Witch and Heroes Reborn Iron Man in the 6-inch assortment, Avengers: Legends of Power.

Where: Available at all toy and comic book/hobby stores.

When: Loki, and the rest of Toy Biz's Avengers line, should be in stores right now!

Why: Who da man? Loki! This figure simply kicks ass. He's by far the best figure in Toy Biz's new Avengers assortment. His costume details are followed to a T, from his gold gauntlets and linebacker shoulder pads to his extra-spiffy cloth cape and horns so big they're liable to poke your eye out. Loki's maniacal grin is perfect, giving this figure that little extra touch that separates him from his plastic counterparts. Even though his knees aren't articulated and he totes a shiny bowling ball accessory around, this is another top-notch figure from the gang at Toy Biz. Three cheers to the Biz for actually making Loki…and doing a knockout job! ■ The ToyFare Staff

COMPANY UPDATES

ANTARCTIC PRESS

Two new exclusives are on the way! Hunger 50 will offer a silver Warrior Nun Areola variation. "It's definitely the last time we'll use that mold," Antarctic Vice President Joe Bonn says. Also, White's Guide to Collecting Figures will offer an Antarctic exclusive which Bonn says will most likely be a glow-in-the-dark or gold variant for Shotgun Mary or the upcoming DFA Warrior Nun figure.

GALOOB

Galoob announced in October it would end several of its male action product lines, including Men in Black, in order to concentrate on its Star Wars Action Fleet and assorted Micro Machines lines. Practically all the company's action figure lines were money losers...Galoob also snapped up the rights to produce Spice Girls fashion dolls. The Spicy British quintet will hit stores in December in an 11 1/2-inch scale...Direct sales continue, either over the phone (1-800-4-GALOOB) or on the web (http://www.galoob.com/BuyDirect/index.html). The company now offers Starship Troopers, Aliens, Predator, All-Star MVPs, Indy 500 and Star Wars—not a bad option if you can't find the suckers in stores.

HASBRO TOY GROUP

Hasbro finally unveiled the top secret Newborn Alien from the company's collector-friendly Alien Resurrection assortment. As the debut from the all new Hasbro Signature Series, the Newborn Alien joins a lineup of larger, more intricately sculpted action figures that should drive collectors into a frenzy!...Various alert! Some interesting tidbits from Kenner's Star Wars: Power of the Force 3 3/4-inch action figure collection. The current green-carded Darth Vader action figure is actually the Dark Lord of the Sith from the recent Shadows of the Empire two-pack Darth Vader vs. Xizor. This marks the first time this sculpt of Vader has been carded alone. In addition, the new Wedge Antilles action figure packaged with the Millennium Falcon Carry Case sports a running change. The debut offering sported helmet deco featuring the Rebel Alliance insignia. Star Wars Trilogy fans know this ain't so. Wedge, on his figure likeness now reflects, sports a helmet with green stripes.

MCFARLANE TOYS

Isz you Isz or Isz you ain't my baby? According to McFarlane Toys Collector's Club Director Chet Jacques, if you don't have a Bag of Isza yet, you're out of luck. "We ran out," Jacques explains. The popular exclusive was previously offered through the club and at comic conventions, but now they're all gone. Look for a new bag of some other McFarlane accessory in time for the '98 convention season...The "Spawn" movie deluxe version of Malebolgia has a variant—a number of figures have shipped with pink bones on his arms and horns, instead of the normal tan...Also, McFarlane has decided to go back and ship more Spawn III (the version with the little wolf cutter) to meet consumer demand.

MOORE ACTION COLLECTIBLES

If you've bought one of the Witchblade Sterling Edition Cold-cast Porcelain statues from Moore Creations, you might have some stolen goods. If your statue doesn't have a signed certificate of authenticity or if you didn't buy yours directly from Moore Creations, you might have one of 200 statues recently stolen from the company. If that's the case, get on the horn and give 'em a call at (817) 568-2620 ext. 18 to verify your edition number.

PALISADES TOYS

It's the 15th anniversary of the Japanese property Macross, and Palisades is gonna help celebrate—and how! At the end of the month, Palisades will release 12 newly sculpted 8-inch Macross figures as part of its recent deal to become the exclusive Macross agent in the U.S. Palisades President Mike Horn says the figures will retail for close to their Japanese price—almost unheard of for Japanese imports, which usually run double to triple the overseas retail. Four more Macross figures will follow in 1996.

TOY BIZ

The Famous Covers follow-up, tentatively titled Famous First Appearances, has already made a running change in its lineup. Originally slated to include Captain America, Thor, Dr. Doom and Hellcat, Toy Biz has substituted X-character Bark Phoenix for the heroine Hellcat, which should delight X-Men fans. Hellcat fans, on the other hand, have to wait a while longer for the debut Patsy Walker action figure.

PLAYMATES TOYS

Sure, there's acres and acres of cool fan-made webpages out there, covering every conceivable topic and worshipping even the least spectacular elements of society—like "Turbo Teen." Man, did that cartoon suck. Fan-made webpages often enter the realm of World Wide Web Greatness purely on enthusiasm alone, while corporate websites languish in flaccid mediocrity.

Sometimes, though, the best websites come straight from the horse's mouth. Access to inside info and product on a page supported by a paid staff can often add up to a must-see stop on the info thruway.

Such is the case with Playmates' official company website. It's all-encompassing and extremely quick to load, with lots of cool, up-to-date photos and tidbits. There's contests to enter, press releases to read and lots of product info. It's neither brief nor unwieldy—mostly quick little bites of news and art. And since Playmates is the home of Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles and Star Trek, it's A-list toy news, too.

Also take into consideration that when it comes time to decide on the new Star Trek line, fan feedback, much of it through the Internet, shapes the characters in each assortment more than any other factor. Star Trek is a collector line, so collectors have enormous say in the final product. How can you get your say? You can visit the Playmates website, for starters. ■ Tom Root

SPACED OUT!

Danger, Will Robinson!

Trendmasters will put a retro feel into the holiday season with its release of the Lost in Space Classic Robot just in time for Christmas.

The Classic Robot, lifted straight from the flickering images of the '60s "Lost in Space" TV show, packs a load of features into its 11-inch frame. With a pop-up head, pop-out arms, lights, a laser pistol and a voice chip ("Danger, Will Robinson!" and "My sensors indicate an intruder is present"), this ain't no boring pile o' bolts.

The Classic Robot represents the initial wave of Trendmasters' Lost in Space merchandise, with action figures, playsets and vehicles on the way to support the brand new feature film starring William Hurt, Mimi Rogers, Gary Oldman and Matt LeBlanc, arriving in theaters April 3. ■ James B. Barnes

Trendmaster's Lost in Space Classic Robot rolls into stores this Christmas.

More Power of the Force Figures Unveiled for 1998!

Last issue, we took an extensive look at Kenner's 1998 Star Wars: Power of the Force offerings. For those readers living under a rock, Kenner won out over fierce competition to continue making Star Wars product, including action figures and vehicles, well into the next millennium. In addition to adapting characters for the very first time and continuing to offer old favorites, Kenner moves forward with bold new ideas like Expanded Universe, which takes advantage of conceptual art and prototypes from the Star Wars Trilogy to capture "off-camera" characters and vehicles, in addition to rendering action figures from other Star Wars media, such as video games, novelizations and comic books.

We said it before and we'll say it again: The Force is with Kenner in '98...and we've got even more wonderful toy pics to prove that point. Enjoy! ■ The ToyFare Staff

◀ BIGGS DARKLIGHTER

Never-before-seen in any Kenner assortment, Luke Skywalker's best pal and doomed X-Wing pilot makes his debut in 1998 in a striking Kenner likeness. Just goes to show what a little "Special Edition" footage will do to bump ya up the action figure food chain.

ISHI TIB ▶

Though noted in Star Wars literature as one of Jabba the Hutt's lowlies, Ishi Tib here can be spied in the Rebel command center as Luke and company plan to take out the second Death Star, which makes him a good guy. Either that or a low-down dirty Imperial spy...why we oughtta.... Oh yeah, the figure, another first-timer for Kenner, looks especially spiffy.

ZUCKUSS ▲

Okay, here's the deal: A long time ago in a galaxy far, far away, Kenner released bounty hunters Zuckuss and 4-LOM, but mixed the names up on the blister cards. 15 years later, the company got it right. For the last time: 4-LOM is the droid. Zuckuss is the 17 bug feller.

EWOKS ▲

Following in the path of its much-enjoyed Jawas two-pack featuring two different versions of the little scamps, Kenner's 1998 Ewoks two-pack includes both Wicket and Logray to roast Han Solo over an open fire. Mmmm...them Corellian smugglers make good eats! By the way, Logray's on the left, Wicket's on the right.

ENDOR REBEL SOLDIER ▲

Two words: Blaster fodder. Though the Ewoks and their sticks and stones did more to thwart the Empire than the crack Rebel troops, collectors are gonna go nuts for Kenner's update of the Endor Rebel Soldier, all decked out with blaster rifle and backpack.

C-3PO ▲

This marks only the second Kenner likeness of C-3PO in the current Power of the Force offerings, updating the removable limbs gig and adding a shoulder harness for Chewie to lug this pain-in-the-you-know-what around. Look for Threepio to make a return engagement in 1998's "Purchase of the Droids" Cinema Scene 3-Pack alongside a less beefcake Luke and debut Uncle Owen Lars figure!

LAK SIVRAK ▲

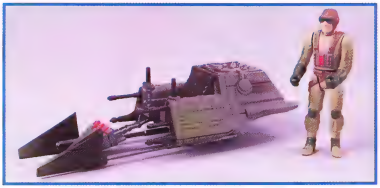
In Star Wars lore he's known as the Shistavanen Wolfman, seen briefly in the Mos Eisley Cantina. First shown last issue, we thought we'd bring the wooey cool Lak back to show off his formidable blasters. Nice doggie.

EPIC FORCE BOBA FETT ▲

With Epic Force, Kenner is serving up larger versions of classic Star Wars characters, each sculpted in a pose taken directly from the Trilogy, in addition to arriving in "try-me" packaging that allows collectors to spin the character 180 degrees for viewing pleasure. Right after this scene, Fett became an after-dinner mint for the Sarlacc Pit.

EPIC FORCE C-3PO ▲

By our reckoning, the Epic Force Threepio is rendered from footage of the Rebels fleeing from TIE Fighters after picking up the soundly thrashed Luke Skywalker in "The Empire Strikes Back." R2-D2 left his buddy with only one leg to stand on in order to reactivate the Millennium Falcon's hyperdrive. Whatta pal!



◀ EXPANDED UNIVERSE SPEEDER BIKE

Adapted from pre-production artwork and concept sketches, Kenner's new Expanded Universe lineup does just that...mining new potential in the lucrative Star Wars license. The EU Speeder Bike and Pilot is merely the first new addition.

EXPANDED UNIVERSE AIR SPEEDER ▶

Initially, this was one of the designs slated for the Rebel Snowspeeder used by the good guys to patrol the Ice planet Hoth and whup AT-AT butt. (Mostly, the AT-ATs won.) Readers of ToyFare ~25 got an initial glimpse of the EU Air Speeder. Check out an updated pic that spotlights the exclusive pilot figure!

◀ EXPANDED UNIVERSE CLOUD CAR

Also profiled last issue, what would later become the twin-pod Bespin Cloud Car is seen in its singular glory alongside its accompanying pilot. With any luck, Kenner'll adopt the real deal for 1998, complete with the "Empire" pilot and maybe a Labat to boot!

TAUNTAUN ▶

Even though their most notable on-screen representatives were either a) Cold-konked by a Wampa and devoured; or b) Overcome by hypothermia, exhaustion and a lightsaber disembowelment, this nifty beast of burden warms the cockles of just about every Star Wars fans' hearts. He'll show up in 1998's Creature assortments with bending-knees Hoth Luke. How's that, kiddies?

◀ ELECTRONIC POWER F/X X-WING FIGHTER

And finally, also spied for the first time last ish, Kenner's new Power F/X X-Wing improves on the design of the original vehicle. Sleeker and more aerodynamic, this version more accurately represents the Trilogy versions. Oh yeah, that and it comes packin' light and sounds that literally re-enact the entire trench-fightin', torpedo-launchin', Death Star-thrashin' scene from "Star Wars." Stellar job, Kenner! TF

TOYFARE TAKES A GANDER AT THE HOTTEST NEW RELEASES

RESIDENT EVIL

Rotting zombies. Piles of maggots. Exploding dogs. Jeffrey Dahmer's lunch menu? Nope. The cast list for "Evil Dead 4"? Guess again. They're all vital parts of Toy Biz's latest video game-inspired action figure line: Resident Evil!

Unless you've been living under a rock for the last few years, you know that video games have evolved into hyper-realistic thrill rides. You might also know that one of the hottest and most violent games out there is Capcom's Resident Evil. This gory, realistically animated bloodbath of a game pits the player against hordes of zombies and slobbering beasties in a sequestered mansion. Sounds like the perfect recipe for an action figure hit.

For Toy Biz, adapting Resident Evil for the action figure front was a natural. "We're always looking for new niches to get involved in and this seemed to be the perfect opportunity," claims Toy Biz product manager Jesse Falcon. "Video games today are so much more like movies that the strength behind the whole concept of Resident Evil was something that we could really capitalize on from the toy perspective."

To follow the action of the game and to give the individual action figures more play value, each figure in this 5-inch line, set to debut in early '98, will be packed with special "sidekicks." The hero Chris Redfield comes with Cerberus, a zombie-fied dog complete with an exposed ribcage and stomach, while heroine Jill Valentine is joined by a giant spider called the Web-Spinner. You want monsters? The line's zombie figure is actually two of the shambling brain-eaters, a Lab Zombie and Forest Zombie, in one package. The Hunter, a hulking mutant creature, comes side-by-side with one of the line's creepiest characters, the Chimera, a half-man, half-fly monstrosity. The game's final villain, Tyrant, rounds out the assortment, and while he doesn't come with a sidekick, he stands tall at a whopping 8 inches. "He's going to be in scale with the line in terms of the game," Falcon explains. "He just towers over the rest of the figures."

Because of the game's polygonal animation (textures are layered over wire frames, giving things a slightly angular look) the designers at Toy Biz were given free reign to fill in some of the gaps for the toys. "The details on the characters in the game are more like representations of details; you look at them for movement or color," Falcon explains. "To help out our sculptors, Capcom provided us with their concept paintings of the characters. But for the zombies, the Hunter and Tyrant, we only had one picture to work from, so we got to go off a little bit and interpret what we thought the detail would be."

In order to get the right level of gross-out gore and ickiness, Toy Biz provided its sculptors with tons of reference material, including medical textbooks and indexes of skin diseases. "We wanted to illustrate to a detailed degree what the human body looks like turned inside-out," Falcon says. Throw in some sculpted-on maggots, flayed skin and a few gallons of blood-red deco and you've got an action figure line ready to out-monster everything else on the shelves.

With Resident Evil, Toy Biz has created a visually stimulating action figure line that will even appeal to those few people who might have never heard of the video game. "If someone walks into the store and knows nothing about Resident Evil, they're going to take one look at the Hunter or Tyrant and freak out," Falcon says. "If nothing else, I think these toys are very visual. They're some of the coolest toys we've every done."

With a highly anticipated sequel game hitting stores next year, as well as the possibility of the concept making the leap to the big screen, it looks like it'll be next to impossible to ignore Resident Evil in the coming months. And that can only mean one thing—even more drooling zombies shambling down toy store aisles. TF

X-Man headlines Marvel's Most Wanted, one of Toy Biz's exciting lineups for 1998!

A gallery of Toy Biz's 1998 heroes, villains and other assorted mutants

Toy Biz has more staying power than the Energizer Bunny.

Sound like an exaggeration? Think again. Since 1990, The New York-based toy company has done what some toy companies only dream of: It's taken an entire universe of comic book characters and made an impressive and best-selling array of superheroes, supervillains, monsters and other assorted mutants. And not just a couple of assortments. Uh-uh. With the number of Marvel Comics-inspired action figures already well into the triple digits, Toy Biz is indeed still going, with no signs of slowing down.

Buoyed by strong sales of X-Men and Spider-Man figures, Toy Biz is charting new territory in 1998 with its launch of the Silver Surfer franchise and the addition of a slew of collector-driven lines, most tied in some way to Marvel's most popular mutants. Heck, the company even resurrected the popular 8-inch multi-articulated style popularized by the late great Mego Corp. with its new Famous Covers figures. The question for Toy Biz collectors isn't "Where do they go from here?" More appropriately, where Toy Biz's rendering of Marvel characters is concerned it's more likely "Who's left?"

Collectors have seen more than just the X-Men and related characters. They've been treated to more Spideys than you can shake a stick at. They've seen the Avengers and the Fantastic Four. Howzabout the Inhumans? Toy Biz made most of 'em. What about the New Mutants? They're on the way. Heck, even newbies like mutant Nate Grey, the appropriately dubbed X-Man, will be working his way into the multi-articulated plastic world of action figures alongside fellow "Age of Apocalypse" vet Blink in Toy Biz's aptly titled Marvel's Most Wanted assortment, possibly with a surprise guest star. And then there's the all-new Classic X-Men six-pack featuring the Len Wein and Dave Cockrum-created "international" X-Men from Giant-Size X-Men #1…and Blade movie action figures…and more Famous Covers figures, including Dr. Doom, Dark Phoenix, Thor and Cap! Get the picture?

There ain't no stoppin' 'em now…and thanks to the fine folks at Toy Biz, who allowed the ToyFare staff a peek into their 1998 showroom, we bring you just a few of their offerings for next year in this Mighty Marvel Action Figure Gallery.

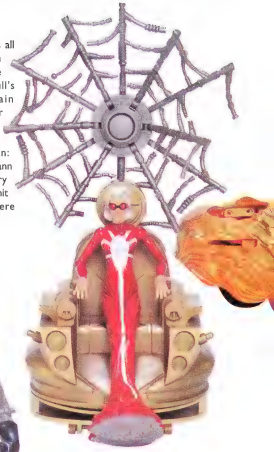
THE RED SKULL

Bucky!!! Even though this Ratzi scum is all set to debut in a 1998 Spider-Man assortment (name still hush-hush), True Believers know that the Red Skull's No. 1 arch-nemesis is Captain America, the shield-slingin' defender of liberty who coincidentally also appeared in one of Spidey's assortments—last year's Spider-Man: Electro-Spark, to be exact! Look for Johann Schmidt here and his trusty accessory (trust us: it ain't for dunkin' Oreos) to hit toy shelves next year. Sadly, Skull here arrives minus ein Cosmic Cube. Curses!



ELECTRO SPIDEY

Whaddya do to take down the supercharged baddie Electro when one touch makes you a crispy-fried Web-head? If you're Spider-Man, you just don some impressive insulated armor and proceed to thump Electro all the way back to prison. While many collectors may tire of endless and often out-of-character variants on Spidey, Toy Biz continues to impress fans with their devotion to detail, as with this Steve Skroce-designed costume which actually appeared in Amazing Spider-Man #425!

MADAME WEB

After Spidey-foe Swarm made the action figure cut in 1997's Spider-Man: Spider Force assortment, the sky's the limit for obscure Web-head characters from the comics to get the action figure treatment. Of course, making an appearance on Fox's "Spider-Man" animated series doesn't hurt either. Case in point: Madame Web, the enigmatic prognosticator seen here with her techno-chair and nifty webbing. Even though her lower extremities are only articulated at the knees (and sans feet!), Madame Web is an impressive addition that's sure to delight hardcore Spider-Man collectors. Best bets for 1999? Howzabout Rocket Racer and Slyde, the uh…Teflon-coated villain?

ARACHNOPHOBIA

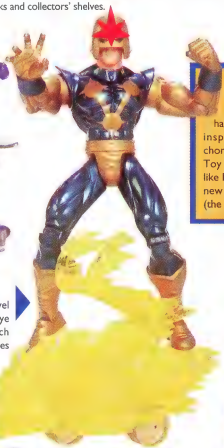
Spidey fans will also want to be on the lookout in 1998 for all-new versions of such classic Web-head foes as Hobgoblin, the Vulture, Carnage and Jack O'Lantern…plus the gorgeous-but-deadly Silver Sable, just to name a few!

SANDMAN

The only thing cooler than having the first-ever adaptation of this classic Spider-villain (and one-time Avenger, mind you) is knowing that collectors can finally assemble the combined might of the dreaded Sinister Six to plague alla them Spidey figures! All you gotta do is add Sandy here to your Doctor Octopus, Electro, Mysterio, Kraven the Hunter (or substitute Sixer the Hobgoblin) and the Vulture (the classic, Adrian Tooms Vulture, due out next year!) and you've got 'em all!

SILVER SURFERS

The latest Marvel Comics character to make the leap from the funny pages to the small screen, Norrin Radd, former herald of Galactus and scion of the spaceways, helms several new Toy Biz assortments aimed at the animation set as well as the collector. Seen here in his classic form, in addition to a nifty blue "nebulous" Star Surfer, the Surfer here is ready to hang ten all the way to toy racks and collectors' shelves.



HERALD THIS!

While the "Silver Surfer" animated series has yet to hit the airwaves in all its Jack Kirby-inspired glory (complete with the planet-chompin' Galactus rendered entirely in CGI!), Toy Biz already has plans to adapt characters like Pip the Troll, in addition to releasing entirely new versions of the late great Captain Marvel (the Mar-Vell one, kiddies) and Galactus himself!

NOVA

Way to go, Toy Biz! Not only do Marvel collectors get a dose of the Frankie Raye Nova in the Biz's collector-based 6-inch Silver Surfer assortment, the company goes one better for 1998: the original Nova, Richard Ryder!!! Do we smell a New Warriors assortment around the corner? Stranger things have happened. And yes, readers, that helmet is removable.

THANOS

Once the wielder of the awesome Infinity Gauntlet (and slayer of just about the whole Marvel Universe 'fore he got his purple butt whupped), this latest Thanos figure—this one a 5-incher—marks Toy Biz's second shot at the evil galactic villain, all set to join the "Silver Surfer" animation-inspired 5-inch assortment for 1998. This time around the...uh...Infinity glove is off: Thanos' sports a biiig gun. That'll learn 'em.

RAZE

Toy Biz scored big with Fantastic Four collectors several years ago when it introduced the Super Skrull to toy shelves. This time around the Biz is crafting up an all-new incarnation of one of those nasty Kree-fightin', world-invadin' alien Skrulls. And like any worthwhile alien conqueror, our Skrull buddy Raze here comes with...you guessed it...a big alien projectile-launching blaster. Bet the Surfer leaves skidmarks on that big green chin of his....

RONAN THE ACCUSER

Though he's slated for Toy Biz's all-new Silver Surfer 6-inch assortment of action figures, the Supreme Public Accuser of the Kree Empire would fit just as nicely in collectors' FF collections since Ronnie here first battled the team waaay back in Fantastic Four #65. With his "cosmi-rod" (the approximate English translation of his hammer-like accessory) in tow, Ronan the Accuser joins the roster of other fine spacebound Marvel characters Toy Biz has in mind for the Surfer as he speeds to TV and toy shelves.

DRAX THE DESTROYER

Yet another cosmic character joining the Silver Surfer's ranks is Drax the Destroyer. Just another green-skinned behemoth? Try again. When Drax here got one of those mega-powerful Infinity Gems in Warlock and the Infinity Crusade, did he attach it to his costume and kick serious butt? Nope. He thought it was a jelly bean and ate it...then he kicked some serious butt, powered by the Gem, which henceforth resided somewhere between his colon and lower intestine. Seriously.

WARLOCK

Seen for the first time in last issue's appropriately titled "New Mutants" feature, Warlock here was spied sans mask in his Doug Ramsey "Douglock" incarnation. Y'see, Toy Biz combined the two for double the pleasure, double the fun. Not bad for a dead character…but one that's sure to whip mutant collectors into an X-rated frenzy.

WOLFSBANE

For fans who are counting, this is the second action figure adaptation of mutant werewolf Rahne Sinclair to date. The first? Try the Wolfsbane redecoed from the X-Men: Ninja Force's Space Ninja Deathbird in the Puzzle Zoo exclusive Marvel Hall of Fame She-Force 2… whew! Anyway, this sharp-lookin' totally new sculpt beats gluing horsehair onna Deathbird any day of the week…plus, she's got a funky projectile-launching backpack for her first day at junior high.

MUTANT MANIA

Listen up, collectors! Just because Toy Biz's New Mutants line only has three figures doesn't mean that the company wouldn't go back and sculpt up the rest of the team if sales warranted it! You wanted X-Man and Blink…and you got 'em! Toy Biz has long been a company willing to take collectors' interests to heart…so don't be shy. If you want a character made, put pen to paper and send letters! Type out an e-mail! Do what you gotta do, but let your voices be heard!

MAGIK

Finally, also seen for the first time in ToyFare #5, Toy Biz's Magik headlines the three-figure New Mutants assortment. With helmet, Soulsword and accompanying Lockheed figure, the dearly departed Illyana Rasputin here kicks major ass…even though she's dead. But hey, who's countin'?

This is just the tip of Toy Biz's Marvel iceberg!

Keep readin' these very pages in the future for looks at such Keen Marvel Comics characters as Typhoid Mary, Stegron the Dinosaur Man and Ultron—all part of Toy Biz's new assortment dubbed the Vault—as well as in-depth looks at all the latest Spider-Man, X-Men and other cool assortments the company's got in store for 1998! TF

The ToyFare staff would like to graciously thank the Toy Biz staff for letting us into their showroom to see these waaay cool action figures…and for springing for those warm Cokes. You guys are a class act.

TOYFARE GETS TO THE BOTTOM OF THE DC TOY COLLECTOR'S #1 DILEMMA

By Matthew Brady

Let's all admire our collections of DC Comics action figures.

There's the Superman Red/Superman Blue two-pack right beside the eight-member Justice Society collector's boxed set. And doesn't that gorgeously sculpted Wonder Woman figure look snazzy beside the Jack Knight Starman figure with light-up gravity rod staff, which stands right next to the Azrael and Black Canary, and…uh, sorry. So much for wishful thinking.

In a perfect world, fans of DC Comics-related toys wouldn't have to merely dream about a spiffy Martian Manhunter figure…or a Legion of Super-Heroes assortment…or a peachy-keen Sandman toy series. In a perfect world, these toys would be a reality.

So why the heck aren't there more DC toys? Sit back. It's a complicated story.

There have been DC Comics toys. Plenty of 'em, actually. The first official DC figures came out in 1972 as part of Mego's World's Greatest Super-Heroes! line, which also served as an unofficial tie-in with ABC's "Super Friends" cartoon series. Mego captured many of DC's most popular heroes and villains, including company stalwarts like Batman and his foes, Superman, Green Arrow, Captain Marvel, the original Teen Titans and so on. The line ended in 1977, restarted in 1979, and finally ground to a halt altogether in 1980.

The next line of DC action figures to exploit the company's rich character library was Kenner's Super Powers collection, produced from 1984 to 1986. The appropriately named Super Powers figures each had an individual action feature which was triggered whenever the character's arms or legs were squeezed. For example, Red Tornado's lower extremities spun in cyclone fashion when you squeezed his arms. The Flash simulated running in much the same way. Get the picture?

In its favor, Super Powers was an ideal model of how comics-based toy tie-ins should work. DC Comics supported the action figures with three Super Powers limited comic book series, and with a short-lived "Super Powers" animated series that dusted off some of the old "Super Friends" footage and added new characters and adventures as well. While many of the figures in the line's later assortments made the casual collector utter a "Who the hell is this?" in aisle seven, the Super Powers line was a dream come true for the longtime DC fan, and contained stalwarts like Green Lantern, Hawkman and Cyborg side-by-side with relative unknowns such as Samurai, Cyclotron, Tyr and Golden Pharaoh.

Following Super Powers, Toy Biz nabbed the license to DC's characters and produced a pretty forgettable line called DC Comics Super-Heroes between 1989 and 1990, following its stab at the "Batman" movie toy license. Toy Biz used most of the old Kenner molds for the first wave, with new sculpts attempted on the second. Despite the vast character library available to them, Toy Biz's DC line was pretty conservative—just Batman, Superman and DC mainstays—and ended in 1990, which allowed Kenner to reacquire the rights and maintain the licenses to this day, scoring monster success with the Batman franchise and most recently relaunching Superman in toy aisles.

The last time a Wonder Woman action figure saw the light of day was as recently as 1993 when Mattel displayed the aborted Wonder Woman and the Star Riders line at the International Toy Fair in New York City. The line was created in support of a planned animated series that was never picked up by any of the networks. "We made the toys, but when the series never aired, we scrapped the entire line," Mattel's Lisa McKendall says.

Slightly behind the late '80s ecological bandwagon, the Star Riders were made up of superheroines who protected the Earth and included Wonder Woman (in her familiar costume, and armed with a…magic wand?!?), Dolphin (protector of the oceans), Ice (protector of the Arctic), Solara (gifted with the power of the Sun) and Starlily (protector of trees and plants). The line's sole villainess was Purrsia, a cat-like character who sought to thwart the Star Riders. Maybe it was a good thing the series tanked.

Obviously, there've been plenty of DC toys in the past, but what about today?

With the current action figure renaissance taking place in the toy marketplace, DC, which boasts a library of thousands of characters, is only represented by two franchises—Batman and Superman, both based on their respective animated series, not their comics. Why? First, you have to look at DC as a company.

POP CULTURE

When it comes to comic book icons DC is number one with a bullet, and their competition slobberingly covets the public recognition of DC's heroes. Ask any person on the street, regardless of age, to name three superheroes, and nine times out of 10, they'll respond with Batman, Superman and Wonder Woman. However, where sales are concerned, DC Comics is No. 2, just behind Marvel Comics, and has been for some time. And therein lies the rub. Fewer readers means fewer potential buyers for toys, no matter how cool an action figure looks.

But comic sales are only one small part of the DC toy story. For the reasons behind the lack of DC Universe toys on store shelves, you've got to know a little bit more about the business side of DC and its parent company Warner Bros., which is in turn owned by media giant Time-Warner. And to understand the business side, you've got to talk to marketing-type people like DC Comics' Cheryl Rubin.

"First of all, we're delighted that collectors are anxious for more DC toys," Rubin says. "But it's important to put things into perspective. Other comic book companies may have single toys of the more obscure characters in their universes, but we come out with major lines, like our Batman line, which we want to maintain for years at a time, not seasons."

This strong "line-oriented" toy philosophy is at the core of DC's toy-making decisions. Instead of merchandising their entire universe, DC chooses to market single characters, such as Superman and Batman. But why not a JLA, Legion of Super-Heroes or Teen Titans line?

To understand why DC makes the toy decisions it does, you need to take a closer look at the main buyers of DC toys. Sure, toy collectors gobble up the likes of Parallax, Harley Quinn and Bane, but there's a larger customer base that's after that Legends of the Dark Knight Batman in aisle seven, and unless you look low, you might miss them. "Our toys are being bought by collectors, but they're also being bought by literally millions of boys ages 5 through 12," Rubin says. "That's where the big money is."

Mary Yedlin, Vice President of Marketing DC Comics and Theatrical Properties at Warner Bros., agrees. "Basically, our core audience of the animated Batman and Superman shows are boys [ages] 3 to 8," Yedlin says. "From a pure financial standpoint, that's where the volume comes from in terms of purchase dollars for toys."

Pure and simple, kids watch the cartoons. Yet, parents still control the money and usually have final say in toy-buying decisions, which makes the toy selling harder—an action figure has to appeal to the kids and pass muster with the parents or just sit on the shelf.

That parental final say weighs heavily into which characters DC and Kenner will produce for this younger market. "We're selling to Target, Kmart, Wal-Mart, and Toys R Us," Yedlin says. "They're looking for characters that will move in volume, and those characters are the ones that have the highest [recognition] among the kids that we're selling to, and their parents as well. That [recognition] gives the property an extra leg up, and in this kind of marketplace, you need everything you can get."

BOX OFFICE BONANZA

Basically, a good rule of thumb for DC characters is this: the more media exposure a character receives, the more likely it will show up as a toy. By media exposure, think movies, television and video games…not comic books. From this media tie-in angle, DC Comics is in effect a big research and development department for Warner's feature film and animation divisions.

"If there's a television series or feature film based on one of our characters, you can bet that there will be a toy line following," Rubin says. "With the mass media exposure, we know we have the awareness to really drive sales of the character at retail. We generally like to come out with toy lines in a big way, and to do that, you need big media support, big retail commitments, big sell-through at the stores, and big reorders. It's one big package."

Translation: box office bombs like "Steel" will get their own toy line, while DC's JLA comic book series, which sells tens of thousands of copies each month, won't. Gone are the days for DC when comic sales were enough to support a toy line.

"When I started at DC Comics in the early '80s, we could license major companies to do toy lines based simply on the fact that the characters had comic books being published, and the comics had a following," Yedlin says. "That's just not true today if you want to put out new lines of products."

Case in point: Batman: Total Justice. While the JLA-themed line came out under the umbrella of the Batman franchise and featured some pretty cool sculpting, fan interest just couldn't sustain it, and the line was discontinued, despite the third and final wave enjoying a collector rush as fans sought to complete their TJ lineups. Rubin's reasoning for the line's demise? The numbers just weren't there.

All of this is not to say that DC-based toys don't or won't sell. Just look at Batman, DC's 800-pound gorilla in the toy aisle.

"The Batman line has been one of the top 10 boys' toy lines for eight years running," Rubin says. "Most of the time, Batman toys are in the top five. To keep that momentum up for that long is just phenomenal."

So why not apply the "Batman formula" to the rest of the DC Universe? According to Rubin and Yedlin, there isn't a simple answer. Batman is more than just a comic book character. He's an icon, a cultural phenomenon. With Batman, you've got over 50 years of character history, worldwide recognition and an incredibly strong mass media presence. Those are factors that don't come down the pike every day.

"Batman's part of our culture, and is extremely 'toyetic,' because he's human, and needs all the gadgets to be a hero," Yedlin says. "Plus, parents are comfortable with the character since they grew up with the 'Batman' series in the '60s. Couple all of that with the fact that starting in 1989, we started an unbelievably successful series of movies, along with the immensely popular animated series, and you've got a recipe that can't be beat. It's hard to believe that before the first Batman movie, we had the hardest time trying to sell the Batman license—no one was interested. 'Batman' launched an enormous merchandising program that revitalized the entire licensing industry."

When you look at the formula responsible for Batman's huge media and toy presence, it's no wonder that DC and Left: Even though the "Steel" feature film bombed, DC's heavy metal hero is ideal for an animated figure. The Creeper, meanwhile, is already slated for Kenner's Batman assortments.

Right: What Bat-fan wouldn't die for a Ventriloquist and Scarface two-pack?

Warner Bros. would want to do it again with Superman. He's already got the animated series. And from Warner's point-of-view, replacing independent film writer/director Kevin Smith ("Clerks," "Chasing Amy") with the more toy-friendly Tim Burton (who directed "Batman" and the follow-up "Batman Returns") on the upcoming "Superman" movie starts to make more sense. What worked once might just work again.

In fact, the Batman and Superman animated series toy lines are such strong sellers that Kenner can sneak in a guest star or two, which is, for the foreseeable future, the only way DC fans will see some of their favorite heroes as action figures [see sidebar].

But probably the biggest thorn in the side of DC fans wanting to see action figures of their favorite characters is Toy Biz, which continues to crank out wave after wave of X-Men, Hulk and Spider-Man figures. Why can Toy Biz and Marvel do it, but DC and Kenner can't?

"Part of the reason that Marvel was so successful and continues to be successful with what they've done with Toy Biz is due to the fact that Marvel partially owns Toy Biz, so there was a corporate reason for producing all the figures since Toy Biz wasn't a pure licensee, as Hasbro/Kenner is with us," Rubin says.

But even with Superman and Batman under its belt, Warner Bros. is looking for another iconic character to give the long-term, worldwide push. "Other companies have their business reasons for doing what they're doing, and we have ours," she says. "We would like to think that ours is a more long-term approach to maintaining brand equity in the market. We try to maximize opportunities whenever we can, and we do things in a big way whenever we can."

An example of this long-term, careful approach is the Wonder Woman toy license. Even though Wonder Woman is recognized the world over, the character hasn't been in the public eye since the Linda Carter television series in the late '70s. "If we had the answers, believe me, we'd be out there with Wonder Woman toys," Yedlin says. "Wonder Woman, along with being a personal favorite of DC's President and Editor-in-Chief Jenette Kahn, is a very difficult property to make work for girls in this day and age. Again, we'd love to make a line of WW figures just for the collectors, but the numbers needed for sell-through just wouldn't be there."

The difficulty with selling Wonder Woman to girls can be seen with recent WW merchandise releases, from Hallmark figurines to the upcoming Wonder Woman doll by the Robert Conner Doll Company. Unfortunately, all have been aimed at the older fan and not the kid set.

So what does the future hold for DC toys? Is that shelf full of DC figures just a wild fantasy, or will the patient collectors eventually win out? "We look for every opportunity to please our fans," Yedlin says. "Whenever possible, we encourage Hasbro to broaden the lines as much as the market will support. We plan to keep Batman and Superman as viable lines in the marketplace for years to come, and as far as everything else is concerned, we just need to figure out a reason to make it happen, which is something we've had pretty good luck with in the past. DC fans should definitely keep checking those shelves." TF

Matthew Brady would give his left kidney for a Matter-Eater Lad action figure with real "Bleargghhhh" belching action.

Animated at Birth

As just about the only DC action figure fix available to DC fans today, Kenner's Superman and Batman animated toy lines have featured a few guest stars from the shows. Few? Only a few? We want 'em all! And according to the shows' producer, Paul Dini, we may be able to get 'em.

"Kenner will show us prototypes of who they have in the works, and we'll pass along suggestions that fans send our way," Dini says. "They've been listening to more and more suggestions from the fans, so there's a really good chance we'll be seeing more guest stars, particularly from the 'Superman' series, make it as figures."

Just who might make the figure treatment? Already, Apokolips baddies like Kanto, Kalibak and Desaad have appeared on "Superman," with top dog Darkseid already making the toy cut.

Other villains, particularly Titano, Weather Wizard, Toyman and Parasite are strong contenders, while Dini notes that Bizarre is a definite. Beating them all to toy racks will be a certain "S"-wearing gal-pal.

"Supergirl is a classic character that we've reworked. Also, the model on her is very appealing. People will really like the action figure."

In addition, Dini reports that previous guest star the Flash has undergone several revisions at Kenner already, pending final approvals. And a removable-helmet Dr. Fate isn't too far-fetched either. Steel, seen last summer in a movie-based line, is also a definite. And what DC fan wouldn't race to toy aisles for a toy based on cosmic bad-boy Lobo? However, Dini's No. 1 pick is a little cuter.

"I'd love to see a Mr. Mxyzptlk figure," he says.

While new versions of Robin, Batgirl and Nightwing are already on tap from Kenner for 1998, Dini would love to see the company adopt other guest stars and villains from the "Batman" animated series; characters like the Demon, the Ventriloquist, Ra's al Ghul's daughter Talia or the magician Zatanna. Kenner already has the Creeper on tap for '98.

What's holding the rest back?

"If they appeared in more than one episode, like the Creeper, Kenner might look a little more seriously to make them part of the toy group," Dini hints.

Show Biz'ness

BEHIND THE SCENES OF A TOY BIZ TV COMMERCIAL!

"QUIET, PLEASE!"

The bustling background noise in the Firehouse Films studio fades away, and all eyes turn to a brightly lit table on which an 8-inch wall of foam bricks has been painstakingly arranged.

Another call: "TAPE!"

"SPEED!" comes the reply from the far side of the room. Videotape is rolling.

A few seconds from now, the foam wall will tumble apart from a missile blast, revealing the evil visage of Apocalypse from Toy Biz's X-Men: Missile Flyers action figure line behind it. It's just one brief instant of action in the Missile Flyers television commercial, full of swooping gliders and spring-loaded rockets. The shot will last barely a second onscreen, but it's taken hours of preparation to reach this point.

"Watch your head!" The camera hovering over the table swings into place.

"SPEED!"

Around the table, bodies tense, anxious to nail the shot. This isn't the first attempt at shooting down the wall. Or the second. It's already the eighth take of the wall shot, in a commercial 25 shots long.

"Ready, and…ACTION!"

From just off-camera, the missile darts into frame, striking the wall dead center, and…

Nothing.

The foam wall, designed to crash apart as the projectile hits it, refuses to budge. Time to reset the scene and try again.

Across the room, the Toy Biz employees resignedly turn their attention from the monitor back to their paperwork. Commercial shoots might mean a day or two away from the Manhattan office, but visiting the Firehouse set north of the city in New Rochelle, N.Y., is no vacation for the Toy Biz staff. Carlos Lopez pores over design sketches for the upcoming Silver Surfer line while his fellow product manager Jesse Falcon manages to grab the community phone long enough to check his messages. Joann McLaughlin, vice president of Toy Biz's Boys Line, which consists of all Marvel Comics-based action figures, sifts through a stack of photocopied correspondence.

At long last, the foam wall is once again ready for action. Behind the structure, Apocalypse is repositioned. The missile launcher is reloaded.

"Ready, and...ACTION!"

POW! The missile strikes the wall, traveling straight through it. It takes out exactly one brick and leaves the rest intact.

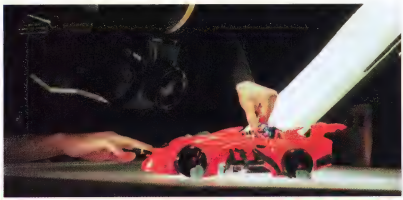
Several of each action figure are prepped beforehand for each commercial shoot.

Time to reset the scene and try again.

"Basically it's a lot of hurry-up-and-wait," Falcon says. Preparing each shot is a long, involved process, tedious setup, then a quick flurry of activity as the cameras roll—all part of trying to get a national audience excited about Toy Biz products with an action-packed TV commercial.

During a three-day stretch in mid-September, the Toy Biz crew has joined members of their Berenter, Greenhouse & Webster advertising firm at Firehouse Films studio for the shooting phase of three commercials. The Missile Flyers commercial is being filmed alongside two commercials for Spider-Man: Spider Force; one concentrating solely on the action figure line, another featuring the Spider Force Web Car.

Spidey gets lowered into his Web Car; one of many, many takes to get the action just right.



While his fellow Toy Biz employees squeeze other work into the stop-and-start shoot, modelmaker Troy Fisher has no problem keeping his hands full. Along with Josh Blaker, Fisher's task is to prepare and maintain the products used in the three-day shoot. It's a job full of obvious tasks, like touching up paint on scratched or scuffed toys; and some not-so-obvious tasks as well.

For one Spider Force commercial alone, a dozen Web Cars stand at the ready. One vehicle's task is merely to serve as a stand-in while lighting the set. Another Web Car has been outfitted with a clear plastic bottom so light can shine through it from below in the commercial's opening shot. Cars are further modified for the desired motion of the "spider legs" on either side of the vehicle.

Above: As per Nickelodeon's mandate, all sets are built to look simple enough for a child to make.
Right: Before shooting, each shot is planned out on a storyboard.

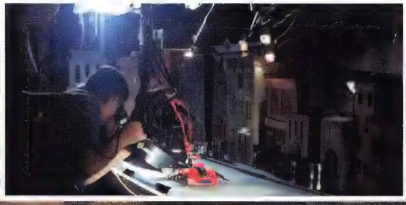
For the X-Men: Missile Flyers commercial, Fisher has modified Bishop's glider—the retractable wings flip open perfectly for kids, but in front of the unforgiving eye of the camera, the expanding wings whip back and forth just a bit too much. In the glider's rocket launchers, Fisher and Blaker have strengthened the springs to shoot the missiles farther and harder than normal. For some camera angles, the missiles must be fired straight into the air, so the added spring tension keeps the projectiles flying straight and true. No kid wants a flaccid-looking Missile Flyer.

Since the commercials often utilize toys from the very earliest production runs, Fisher and Blaker also make sure the paint applications look just right, and fix any decoes which have come off the assembly line looking less than perfect.

As much attention is paid to the sets behind the toys as the toys themselves. As the Missile Flyers Shard swoops past on one of the monitors, Falcon points out the ragged look of some of the buildings



Spidey patrols for crime on one of up to three sets the studio prepares at a time.

Toy Biz President Avi Arad checks out a shot personally.

behind her. "Nickelodeon has a new rule that all sets must look like something a kid can build," he says. "That's why the sets look like they're made of cardboard—not because we're cheap."

Nick's new commercial regulations have affected more than the sets. Toy Biz now must shoot two versions of their Spider Force spot. In the non-Nickelodeon version, the Web Car rises into view on an intricate platform amidst much smoke and light. The version for Nickelodeon eliminates the gosh-wow effects and settles for a more straightforward setting.

As the day progresses, Toy Biz head honcho Avi Arad and CEO Alan Fine stop by to monitor the shoot's progress. Arad likes to keep a close eye on the commercials as they develop, which means he'll soon find himself even busier. After just five Toy Biz commercials in 1997, this year the number will more than double, according to McLaughlin.

While one set is broken down and another is constructed, the camera wheels over in front of another waiting scene. For this dollop of commercial action, a missile is to bounce harmlessly off Bishop's armored wings. The first take doesn't quite cut it. Nor does the second. By the 13th take, BG&W's Leslie Appleby, executive producer on the shoot, has to sit down. "Sometimes the simplest shots take the longest," she sighs, watching on one of the many studio monitors as yet another missile ricochets in the wrong direction.

On another set, the Spider Force figures are assembled for the commercial's final display shot. Clunk! Swarm, always a pest, refuses to stand up for the toy techs. Clunk!

Final editing and approval will take at least another month, but for now, in the middle of one more set on one more shot for one more commercial, time seems to stand still.

That's show business!
Clunk!

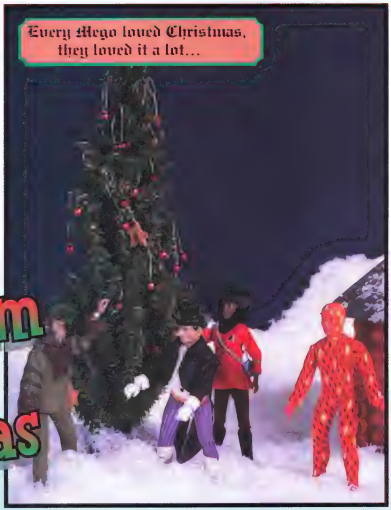
TWISTED MEGO THEATRE

How Von Doom Stole Christmas



Photos by Paul Schmidt. Captain Doctor Doom by Charles Fleit. Fantastic Four-pt. Joshua Dorfman. Lawrence Lubinski. All others characters © & ™ Mego Corporation.

Doom hated Christmas, despised it, detested!
His fevered mind worked as the Megos all rested.

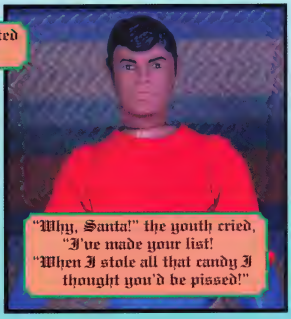
After dreaming of boxes and stockings aplenty
What if there were no presents? Not a one? Not any?

Doom's twisted mind hatched a terrible plot.
He would steal Christmas! Why? Hey, why not?

With makeshift antlers atop his furred noggin
Doom drafted Muffit to pull his toboggan.

His mind full of thoughts of swipe, steal and pillage
Doom's sleigh hurtled down, down toward the village.

His path clear before him,
his resolve resolute
Doom squeezed down the chimney
to scoop up the loot.



"Nonsense," Doom said,
"My list? You're on top!
"Why, I'll even fine-tune
your tree in my shop!"
So with Aqualad fooled and tucked safely in bed
Doom emptied the house; up the chimney he fled.

Back up Doom Mountain with mission completed
Sped Doom and his sled, the punishment meted.

"Christmas is canceled!
Happy Holidays, peasants!
"Your nonsense will cease
with no gifts and no presents!"

But Doom's rant was halted,
no words could be found
When up from the valley
came a curious sound.

The Megos weren't crying
from their present-less tally!
Instead, cheerful song filled
both mountain and valley!

"Where are their screams?" Doom pondered, "their groaning? "No crying? No shouting? No bitching? No moaning?"

It then dawned on Doom, smile gracing his jaw "Christmas...is good!" and he felt his heart thaw.

"My evil deed I'll undo!" Doom spat like a curse Unaware that his evening was gonna get worse.

Poor joyriding Spidey, he never expected...

BAA-DAMM!!!

The horror incarnate as transports connected!

His crusade aborted, gone horribly wrong
Doom hurtled down toward the jubilant throng!

Mouths now hung open and blood pressure soared
As each of the Megos made peace with the Lord.

"Aaaaayyyy," mused the Fonz with his last Earthly breath...

As he was ground into paste
under Doom's Sled of Death!

SLURRRCHH!!!

Crushed were his hopes for toy trains and trucks
The town's lone survivor cried...

MAN, CHRISTMAS SUCKS!

TOY STORY

A LOOK AT ACTION FIGURES FROM YEARS PAST

GOBOTS

IN THE HISTORY OF ACTION FIGURES, THE GOBOTS ARE BUT A FOOTNOTE.

Tonka's line of robot toys is generally perceived as a rip-off of Hasbro's Transformers, but both lines have much in common. Both toy lines consisted of robots that could be "transformed" (through the use of movable parts) into vehicles, animals or other somesuch. Both had their origins in Japan. Both had complementary comics and cartoon tie-ins. Both were even released as theatrical movies.

But the similarities stop there. The Transformers are still going strong, albeit in their new incarnation as Transformers: Beast Wars, and still have legions of fans. By the time GoBots quietly vanished from both toy shelves and air waves as the '80s drew to a close, they were already mostly forgotten. To this day, few action figure and toy guides list the GoBots in any detail, if at all. Nevertheless, the GoBots had a good run in their day, with at least 160 toys released in all. Not bad for a footnote.

The first GoBots toys debuted in the United States in 1984, but their origins go back a few years before that. In 1970s Japan, a "giant robot" craze ran rampant through the country's anime, manga and toys. By the time that phenomenon had made it's way to America in the early '80s (in the form of Shogun Warriors toys, among others), it had metamorphosed into a new transforming robot craze in Japan.

One animated series that came out of that craze was "Machine Robo," which spawned robot toys that transformed into vehicles (for the good guys) and animals (for the bad guys), all made by the Japanese company Takatoku. After Takatoku went out of business, the license (and the molds) were picked up by Bandai, which subsequently licensed the toys (but not the "Machine Robo" cartoon) to Tonka. And in 1984, Tonka released the first GoBots—actually beating Hasbro's Transformers to market by a month or two.

The Transformers have a somewhat similar history up to this point, in that the toys were originally a Japanese import. But where Hasbro launched the Transformers with a tie-in cartoon and Marvel Comics series, Tonka initially had plans to release the toys sans similar marketing. Tonka soon saw that the wild success of both the comics and cartoons drove the demand for Transformers through the roof. Forced to play catch-up, Tonka hurriedly put together both a cartoon series and a comic book of its own. The GoBots comic was short-lived, and while the TV series lasted four seasons, it remains pretty low on most people's lists of favorite cartoons.

The toys themselves went through many different incarnations in the line's short life span. The first round of GoBots included the heroic Guardians and the villainous Renegades, but several different types of GoBots would find their way onto shelves before the end of the line in 1987. The Super GoBots were simply larger versions of the existing toys. Powersuits were suits of armor that could be fitted to most of the regular GoBots toys, and could then be used to form a larger robot.

In 1986, "Battle of the Rock Lords," a GoBots animated movie, was released to theaters, accompanied by the requisite toy tie-in. The movie introduced more GoBots and a new race of transforming robots who could morph into rocks. That's right, rocks. As you might imagine, GoBots was really running out of steam by this time, and interest was fading fast. Jewel

"Battle of the Rock Lords" brought the GoBots to the big screen.

Lords (figure it out yourself) were added to the Rock Lords line, but sales were dropping fast.

As the GoBots trudged on, a few other variations on the transforming theme were introduced, in addition to two bases/playsets. Monsterous and Puzzler GoBots were giant GoBots, each formed by six smaller robots that were sold separately. Dread Launchers could split into two separate vehicles, Secret Riders transformed into vehicles with small friction-powered motors (you pushed them and they would continue riding), and Boomers shot ping-pong balls from their chests.

By 1987, interest in the GoBots had completely vanished and both the toy line and the cartoon were canceled, never to be seen again.

Sort of.

In 1991, the Hasbro Toy Group bought Kenner, around the same time as Kenner was closing a deal to buy out Tonka. The end result was that the company that had once viewed the GoBots as competition now owned them. If the Transformers hadn't been able to make a successful comeback in the early '90s, would toy collectors have eventually seen the return of the GoBots? We may never know. But here's what did happen: First, a Transformer named Gobots was released as part of the Transformers Generation 2 line in 1992. Then, in 1994, Hasbro planned to release a new set of Transformers called the Super-SpeedBots, and ended up releasing the toys under the more compact name GO-BOTS.

Hasbro says it has no plans for the GoBots at present, and why should it with the success of Beast Wars, the newest incarnation of the Transformers? The Transformers and the GoBots show us the best and worst case scenarios for toy marketing. One company took the time to create and develop a story and play scenario. The other threw a cartoon together solely to sell a few toys. One toy line had a major influence in how figures are created and sold, and is a significant chapter in the history of action figures. GoBots, on the other hand, is nearly forgotten, except for the most hardcore transforming toy collector. TF

CRAFTING YOUR OWN HOMEMADE ACTION FIGURES

JACKET REQUIRED By Chris Spaseff

All Photos: Paul Schmidt

Why you should listen to Chris... Reason #8:
He built these Eradicator Superman, Rune and Man-Thing figures from chicken blood and a can of Pringles.

KIDS, BE SURE TO GET PARENTAL CONSENT BEFORE YOU BEGIN!

Ingredients

These are the supplies you'll need for this month's installment. If it's not available at your local hobby or craft store, we've noted another source.

1. X-Acto handle with #11 blades
2. Milliput or A/B epoxy
3. 16- and 22-gauge galvanized wire (hardware store)
4. Safety goggles (hardware store)
5. Heat gun or hair dryer (hardware store)
6. No-Fray (fabric store)
7. Stiffy (fabric store)
8. 10x10-inch piece of wood (lumber store)
9. Steel bracket (hardware store)
10. Plastic wrap or foil (grocery store)
11. Cape material (fabric store)
12. Tool Dip (hardware store)

Hail, custom action figure freaks! By now your figure should be coming along and almost ready for some paint to bring it alive. But first, there are a few things you'll need to accomplish to get your figure ready for that step.

If your character has some additional clothing, such as a jacket or a huge cape, you should construct these while your figure is still unpainted in case you need to modify your figure's body in any way.

Spot the fabric on Man-Thing? No? Gluing bits of fabric to the body can add texture when a figure is painted.

JACKET JIVE

If your figure needs a custom jacket that probably won't look as good whipped outta Super Sculpey, or if you want to use some real leather for that totally custom look, you'll probably need to do some sewing. Since most outfits for your figure will be quite small, a needle and thread will probably suffice. If you don't think you can sew very well or are afraid to try, maybe a family member or a friend can help you out—wuss.

First off, you'll need to pick a fabric that can be stitched with tiny seams, so try to purchase one that doesn't fray easily. Check the edges of the fabric before you buy it—if it's already starting to unravel a bit, it's a sure bet it's only going to get worse once you start jabbing it with a needle.

You can use a product called No-Fray, available at craft and fabric stores, which can solve that particular problem for you. Leather doesn't fray, but it can be quite difficult to sew and form over your character. It looks fantastic, though, so it's always worth consideration. No-Fray is applied like white glue and it dries clear, so it won't be seen.

Next, you'll need a pattern from which to cut your material. I've used the vinyl coat from the first Toy Biz Gambit figure as a pattern, and made my own from tracing paper. Just remember that your figure's arms aren't as flexible as your own arms, so your jacket will need some fullness in order to fit onto your character. If you're using tracing paper, take a small piece about 3 inches by 6 inches and trace around your figure, molding the paper to your figure to get a good pattern.

Now just work around your figure and trace all the pieces you'll need. Look at how a full-sized jacket or pants are sewn to get an idea of where to put your seams. Lay out your pieces and add a small amount of extra room around the edges—remember, your finished piece will be three-dimensional, so you must always keep that extra room in mind. Cut the material around your pattern and apply No-Fray to the edges if your material needs it. Now sew that sucker up using tight, tiny stitches.

It might take several attempts to get it perfect, but remember: experimentation is what this hobby's all about.

CAPE CARNIVAL

There are several ways of making capes for your figure and the method you choose depends, as always, on your character's look and on your budget. First, you'll use your nearly completed figure to mold your cape. Using a scrap piece of wood (approximately 10 inches square), screw a corner bracket near one edge. Place your figure against the bracket and wrap some foil or plastic wrap around your figure and the bracket. Make sure to make the wrap tight so your figure's cape fits snugly and molds around your character's shoulder and neck area. A garbage bag tie twisted around your figure's neck sometimes works. Now your figure is securely held in place, and you're ready for some cape action.

Getting the cape to hang just right may take lots of experimentation.

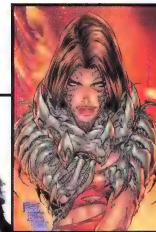
Applying your cape and wing knowledge to hair can produce results like this customized Witchblade.



For a cloth cape you'll need some material that's somewhat thick and opaque but flexible at the same time. Muslin, felt and some polyesters work well for this kind of cape, but, again don't be afraid to experiment. Soak a piece of your fabric in Stiffy, a product available at most fabric and craft stores, following the instructions on the back of the package. Now drape the fabric over your figure. You might have to cut an 1-inch slit in your fabric to get a tight fit around your figure's neck. Arrange the fabric to get some fullness into your cape by pinching and molding, and by letting the fabric hang naturally. It will take time to get the perfect look.

If you need to, you can screw down pieces of your 16-gauge wire and bend it to make a structure the cape can dry on to get that full windblown look.

If you have a long cape like Dark Knight Batman, leave a lot of extra material flowing off the back and form some pleats in the fabric to get the fullness you need. You'll trim the cape after it dries, so don't worry how big it looks now. Wind another garbage bag tie around your character's neck to get a tight fit. Now put this aside to dry fully.

After it dries, you can modify areas by applying more Stiffy to an area you don't like. This will soften it enough to reform it. After setting it aside to dry, trim it to fit using a pair of sharp scissors.

Another way to make a cape is to use Tool Dip, the wicked-cool stuff you use to put soft handles on pliers and screwdrivers. You'll need to use aluminum foil with this method, because this gunk'll melt Saran Wrap. Also, make sure you use Tool Dip outside—the vapors'll knock you on your ass. Tool Dip will also need to be thinned down slightly with lacquer thinner. It's a complicated substance, and this is one of the stages of our customization that adult supervision is a really good idea.

Select a container to mix some of the material in. Foam container: bad idea. It'll melt into ooze. A metal one is preferable. Mix the Tool Dip with some thinner so you can apply it with an old paintbrush. Brush the thinned-down material over the aluminum foil using long, broad strokes. It will probably take several applications of this stuff to get a good cape. Also remember that the smoother the aluminum foil is, the easier it will be to remove.

After you've applied several coats, set it aside to dry. That'll take about eight hours. When it's dry, mix up a little more and brush over any areas that are too thin. You'll probably see aluminum foil throughout these areas. Now set it aside to dry again. When you're sure it's dry, slowly peel the material off the foil. Hopefully the foil was smooth enough and it'll peel off easily. Now just trim it to fit and you have an awesome rubber cape for your figure.

WINGED VICTORY

Wings can also be made using some of these techniques. First you'll need to bend a wire frame following the upper muscle structure. Drill two holes into your figure where the wings will attach to the body. Now glue these wires in, making sure they're in the proper position. Next, attach several wires to suggest the ribs of the wings using the 16-gauge wire and some smaller 22-gauge wire to attach the main wing structure. Apply some super glue to hold the structure in place. Soak a piece of heavy muslin in the Stiffy and drape it over your wing structure. Let this dry and trim it to fit, then glue it on. Take some Milliput and smooth it over the wing to get that stretched-leather kind of feel. Then build up the main rib to convey the muscle structure. Also, some real feathers purchased at a craft store can give it a totally real look, but make sure that you apply them as a final step so no paint gets on them.

Don't glue your cape or clothing on yet, as it's a lot easier to paint your figure without them on.

Grab yer smocks, 'cause next time we're gonna enter the painting stage. See ya next time! TF

Tempe, Ariz., freelance writer Chris Spaseff (unusual@goodnet.com) was at first confused about Tool Dip's proper uses. It ain't a marital aid. Trust him.

THE ROUNDUP OF FUNKY FAN-MADE Kurt Busiek's ASTRO CITY ACTION FIGURES

What's one of the hottest independent comic books on the racks today? Without a doubt, it's gotta be Kurt Busiek's Astro City, with its interesting stories from Busiek himself, top-notch, realistic lookin' art by Brent Anderson and nifty painted covers and character designs from the brush-wielding powerhouse Alex Ross. But the one thing missing is an action figure line. That's where you come in.

Back in ToyFare #3, we ran "The Astro City Homemade Heroes" contest, giving you, the fans, the chance to create your own versions of your favorite Astro City characters. And you responded in droves. After wading through buckets of entries, we came up with the cream of the crop to make up this here "Homemade Heroes" department.

For doing such a great job, this month's winners get to take home a whole mess o' cool stuff. Our grand prize winner nets a set of the new Astro City series (#1-#9) autographed by Kurt Busiek, Brent Anderson and Alex Ross, the Astro City hardcover (also signed by the creative team), an Astro City T-shirt and an Astro City pin. Our four runners-up snag the Astro City trade paperback (signed by Busiek, Anderson and Ross) as well as the T-shirt and pin. Congrats, guys!

HANGED MAN [top]

Jeffrey T. Zverloff, Akron, Ohio

With nothing more than a piece of felt, some twine and Toy Biz's Silver Surfer figure, Jeffrey slapped together this version of the Hanged Man, the supernatural guardian of Shadow Hill. Jeff also used a bit of sculpting putty to give this guy that trademark cracked neck. Way to go!

THE CONFESSOR [center]

Michael Pmaro, Arlington Heights, Ill.

The mysterious Confessor is brought to life with a repainted Multi-Poseable Spider-Man from Toy Biz. The extra bits on his costume are courtesy of Toy Biz's Hobgoblin (for the cape) and Kenner's animated Batman (for the skirt).

THE CONFESSOR AND SILVER AGENT [bottom]

Michael O'Rell, Madison, Wis.

Not another Confessor figure! Good thing Michael went that extra mile and made the Silver Agent too, otherwise his entry would be stuffing for the rat's nest in the back of the Wizard Press warehouse. Anyhoo, here's what he used to create these guys: The Confessor is Toy Biz's Bob the Goon torso, with Kenner's Robocop appendages and head, while Silver Agent is a repainted version of Toy Biz's original Punisher figure.

WINGED VICTORY [top]

Scott A. Sheldon, Leominster, Mass.

Scott here went above and beyond the call of duty with his creation of Winged Victory. Using Toy Biz's 12-inch Rogue and some real feathers, he pieced together this figure that could kick the stuffing outta Barbie any day. Resourceful customizer that he is, Scott even cut up Rogue's jacket to make Winged Victory's accessories.

GRAND PRIZE WINNER

SAMARITAN [bottom]

Kris Meadows and Tom Key, Marietta, Ga.

Astro City's protector, Samaritan, is brought to stunning life in this grand prize-winning figure. This figure's so good, it took two guys to create it!

Georgia residents Tom Key and Kris Meadows both work at a local art supply store, where they came up with the idea to create their Mego-ized Samaritan. "He's probably the most recognizable character from the series," Tom says. "Plus Kris and I are big Superman fans, and Samaritan's kinda like the Astro City equivalent."

Working in their spare time, it took the pair two weeks to create this figure, based on the Alex Ross sketches for the character. Tom sculpted the head and modified the Mego body, while Kris sewed the costume and painted Samaritan's face. The toughest part? The cape. "Kris needed to be creative because material at this scale doesn't fold like real cloth," Tom explains. "He had to carefully go in and make some pleats so the cape looked authentic."

While this is the first creation Tom and Kris have worked on together, both have assembled an impressive roster of homemade figures on their own. Tom has sculpted versions of Dave Stevens' Rocketeer and the Neal Adams-era Green Arrow, while Kris is putting the finishing touches on a Christopher Reeve Superman figure.

HEY!

Up for the challenge of creating some kick-ass action figures? Take a gander at the "Animate the DCU Homemade Heroes Contest" on page 62 for your chance to win a whole mess o' Kenner's animated DC characters!

DIAMOND AND TOYFARE PRESENT:

THE "ANIMATING DC COMICS" HOMEMADE HEROES CONTEST

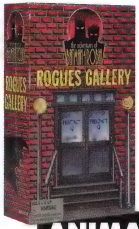
Grand Prize (1): The entire animated DC action figure universe! You'll win:

- Combat Belt Batman
- Ra's Al Ghul
- Bane
- Robin
- The Diamond-Exclusive Rogues Gallery Assortment (Catwoman, Joker, Man-Bat, Poison Ivy, Killer Croc, Phantasm, Clayface and Scarecrow)
- The Riddler
- Two-Face
- The Penguin
- Mr. Freeze
- Wind Blitz Batgirl
- Harley Quinn
- Capture Cape Superman
- Darkseid
- Evil Alien Brainiac
- Lex Luthor

First Prize (15): You'll win:

The Diamond Exclusive Rogues Gallery Assortment (Catwoman, Joker, Man-Bat, Poison Ivy, Killer Croc, Phantasm, Clayface and Scarecrow)

Neat loot, eh? Here's how to win it: Take an existing action figure (or heck, start from scratch if you like) and create a new DC character in animated style form! You can do big guys like Green Lantern and Aquaman, lesser-known characters like Aztek and Bizarro and even the way-out guys like Vertigo's Sandman, Amalgam's Dark Claw and Helix's Spider Jerusalem!



Once you've got your figure(s) done, photograph them in multiple poses and from different angles, and attach your name, address, phone number, age and what you made the toy out of to the back of each photo.

And two no-no's: DON'T photograph them in homemade packaging and DON'T use Polaroids!

No purchase necessary. Contest is open to anyone except employees of Wizard Press, ToyFare, Diamond Distributors and whoever came up with the list of villains for the Superman animated series. Toyman? Titano? Livewire? Where're the few cool Superman villains like Bizarro, Doomsday and the Eradicator? Print your name, date of birth, address, city, state, zip and telephone number with area code on the official entry form or a 3-by-5-inch index card, and attach the form or card to your entry. Enter as many times as you like. Mail each entry separately to: The "Animating DC Comics" Contest, c/o Wizard Press, P.O. Box 118, Congers, NY 10920-0118. No mechanical reproductions of completed forms are accepted, but you can photocopy the entry form before filling it out if you don't want to mess up your magazine. All entries become property of Wizard Press and none will be returned. ToyFare Editor Scott Beatty promises a personal letter of thanks to EVERYBODY who makes a Paul Kirk: Manhunter figure and sends it in. He's the other Manhunter fan. All taxes (federal, state and local, if any) will be the responsibility of the prize winners. No cash equivalent or substitute prizes will be offered. Prizes are awarded in the names of the contest winners and are not transferable. Offer void where prohibited, regulated or restricted by law in a manner inconsistent with the purposes and rules hereof. All entries must be received at contest headquarters by January 30, 1998. Wizard Press is not responsible for lost, late, misdirected or mutilated entries. Odds of winning will be determined by the number of valid entries received prior to the closing date of the contest. Prize winners will be selected based on originality and creativity by Wizard Press. Winning entries will be selected on or about February 14, 1998.

For a list of winners, available after February 14, 1998, send a self-addressed stamped envelope to: The "Animating DC Comics" Winners List, c/o Wizard Press, P.O. Box 118, Congers, NY 10920-0118.

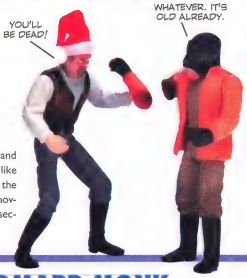
Top 10 Hottest Action Figures

BY CONTACTING HUNDREDS OF RETAILERS THROUGHOUT THE COUNTRY, TOYFARE KEEPS A CLOSE EYE ON THE COUNTRY'S HOTTEST COLLECTIBLE ACTION FIGURES. AND, WELL, HERE THEY ARE...



1. DR. EVAZAN

(STAR WARS: POTF CINEMA SCENE 3-PACK)

Yeah, we know this li'l guy's hot cause he's a) a new Star Wars figure and b) a character who's never been made before, but c'mon, he looks like Schneider from "One Day at a Time" in need of an Oxy Pad. And why the hell doesn't the Ponda Baba that Doc E. comes packaged with have a removable arm?!? Bah! On to weird spider-like Star Wars figures who had two seconds of screen time....

2. B'OMARR MONK

(STAR WARS: POTF)

One of the coolest-looking figures of all time, the exclusive Kenner website B'omarr Monk action figure [http://starwars.hasbro.com/] is also one of the most poorly designed. While the toy is keen as all hell, this character is just askin' for an accident. C'mon...keeping your brain in a glass bowl at the end of your body in a universe populated by armored goons and solid steel androids? Heck, a stray foul ball from a Jawa softball game could turn your lights out in a heartbeat.

3. LUKE SKYWALKER IN CEREMONIAL OUTFIT

(STAR WARS: POTF)

You help rescue a gorgeous princess, you recover vital information believed lost, you're like one of five people to survive a suicide mission against the Death Star and you save an entire planet by blowing the enemy's main warship to itty-bitty pieces and you get...a medal? Wow. No wonder the Rebellion is so under-manned. They pay crap. Although the health plan ain't nothin' to sneeze at...

4. SNOWTROOPER

(STAR WARS: POTF)

The forthcoming Star Wars Prequels have just gotta have Aquatroopers. From what we've seen in "Star Wars," "Empire" and "Jedi," the nasty ol' Empire has regular Stormtroopers, Snowtroopers, forest-type Scout Troopers and Dewback ridin' Sandtroopers. Kenner's even given collectors nifty Crowd Control Stormtroopers with funky jet-packs! Pretty much every type of environment has been used except for...underwater! Aquatroopers have shown up in the comics, now we wanna see them on screen!

5. EMPEROR'S ROYAL GUARD

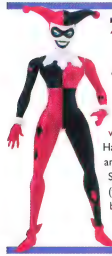
(STAR WARS: POTF)

More Prequel rumors! Y'know how the Empire has so many different colors running through their outfits (black for Vader and Death Star Gunners, white for Stormtroopers, olive-green for high-ranking officers and red for the Royal and Coruscant Guards)? One of the googolplexian rumors regarding the Prequels is that we'll learn what alla them colors mean.

6. WIND BLITZ BATGIRL

(BATMAN: D.U.O. FORCE)

FINALLY! The first Batgirl toy since that Mego doll from the '60s (ignoring the lame Batgirl based on that vomitous car wreck that was the "Batman & Robin" flick), Kenner's new animated series Batgirl proves that you don't need to have Fractal Techgear, light-up swords or splattered blood to be successful. You just gotta be a good toy.



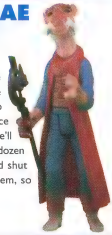
7. HARLEY QUINN

(ADVENTURES OF BATMAN & ROBIN)

Clinging to the Top 10 and still fluctuating on the charts is the first and only action figure based on the Joker's right-hand gal (on the "Batman" animated series anyways), ex-psychiatrist and overall hot tamale Harley Quinn. With the continued release of animated series characters—both Batman, Superman and the new guys like the Creeper (you heard right)— and rumors that she may be one of the villains in the next Bat-movie, expect Harley to stay on the hot charts.

8. SAELT-MARAE (YAK FACE)

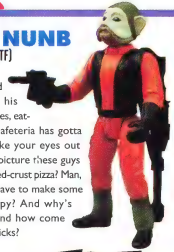
(STAR WARS: POTF)



More firsts! Well, maybe this isn't the first Yak Face figure (Saelt-Marae sounds too feminine, so we'll stick to Yak Face), but it is the first Yak Face released in…wait. Did we just say "We'll stick to Yak Face?" Man, there's like a dozen jokes right there, all of which would shut down this magazine if we touched 'em, so we'll just move along to toy No. 9….

9. NIEN NUNB

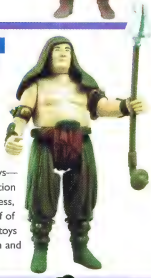
(STAR WARS: POTF)



Between this guy and Admiral Ackbar and his Mon Calamari crewmates, eating at the Rebellion cafeteria has gotta make you want to take your eyes out with a stick. Can you picture these guys eating pie? Tacos? Stuffed-crust pizza? Man, why'd George Lucas have to make some of his aliens so sloppy? And why's Chewbacca naked? And how come there are no robot chicks?

10. MALAKILI (RANCOR KEEPER)

(STAR WARS: POTF)



How this tub of goo made the Top 10 hottest figures is just more proof that the Star Wars line—while populated by mostly great toys—is so popular that even fat guy action figures sell. And sell well. Regardless, we'll put this guy on the back shelf of our toy display along with fellow fat toys that never score: Violator, Kingpin and the Blob.

Castaway FROM THE ISLAND OF MISFIT TOYS

NINJA ICEMAN

HIS CRIME: …Ninja Iceman? Lord, where do we begin? Maybe with the premise. To help in his battles against evil mutants, Iceman dons…ninja garb? Wha'? And how about the fact that he's just a repainted 10-inch Silver Surfer? How about the packing peanut stuffed in his hood to help keep his headpiece all poofy? Or how about that since he's hollow plastic, he wouldn't sink if you threw him in a lake? This toy puts the "C" in crap.

MARKET WATCH

WHAT?!? WHO?!? HE SAID WHAT?!? THAT'S SELLING FOR HOW MUCH?!? WHEN?!?

COLLECTING MARVEL: BIGGER IS BETTER

By Lars Pearson

They're selling like they're "collectible," but are you sure about that?

In a market where the collector is king, Toy Biz has been raking in the dough with its Marvel Collector Editions, which include the recent X-Men: Onslaught, Avengers: Legends of Power, Silver Surfer and Famous Cover lines. And, though it isn't blatantly labeled as such, the Hulk: Transformations toys lean toward collectors as well with the Toy Biz standard 6-inch collector size.

Comic book fans would sell their vital organs for these toys, since they pay heed to nit-picky, anal points of comic continuity the toy-buying public couldn't care less about. X-Man Jean Grey teamed with the Juggernaut during the "Onslaught" storyline, so they're packaged together. Unlike his action figure, the Silver Surfer never had the cosmic Infinity Gauntlet—but his attempt to snare the magical glove was one of the more memorable moments of the Infinity Gauntlet mini-series. And the Maestro from Hulk: Transformations is faithful to Incredible Hulk: Future Imperfect even down to the age spots and helmets of fallen heroes (all he needs is a skewered Rick Jones…ewww).

With their larger price tags ($8-$10 retail in many stores), these toys are still a hit among older buyers with money to burn. However, it can't be repeated enough to you brazen-hussy collectors out there that toys blatantly labeled "collectible" nine times out of 10 aren't. For toys to shoot up in price, it's helpful if the supply is whittled down by kids (or even adults) playing with the toys, mutilating them or leaving them in the yard to die horribly decapitated by a lawnmower blade. But any time the word "collectible" is used, the impulse is to leave the toys sealed in pristine condition or sitting on a shelf out of harm's way.

Toy Biz can still capitalize on this by getting older collectors to pay more, which is good, because we can't imagine a 12-year-old kid crazed enough to fork over money for Spider-Man's Aunt May. Can you?

BEAST WARS ROAR AT REGISTER

These ain't your brother's Transformers, but they're starting to sell like 'em.

It took a while for Transformers: Beast Wars, those brand-new monstrous versions of characters from the ultra-hot 1980s Transformers line, to really get cookin'.

Some Transformers veterans wailed like Gregorian Monks over the loss of the cool cars and planes concept. Others decried the Beasties as being unworthy of the metallic logo. But the complaints finally gave way to register dollars in what can only be labeled as a sleeper hit for Hasbro.

The revival's sparked primarily by three groups: 1) Ruthlessly loyal collectors who bought Transformers in the 1980s, have enough to stock a small hockey stadium, and have no intention of stopping now; 2) Kids who are swayed by the current computer-generated "Beast Wars" animated TV show; and 3) People who think the intricate toys are, for lack of a better term, "durn spiffy."

Hasbro plans to continue the line in 1997 with new Beasties that have both a vehicle and beast form, and a small set of deluxe figures that each look like two animals fused into one. What does this mean to you? More toys, sure, but as the line diversifies, you'll want to pay close heed to the first wave, which could show price spikes.

Keep in mind that the Transformers: Generation 2 line from the early 1990s quickly croaked at the sales register, so Beast Wars weren't made in huge supply. But since the toys are selling, you've got a classic high demand, low supply situation—exactly the conditions needed for a price spike.

XENAMANIA

Xena, Xena, Xena. That buxom warrior vixen is doing outrageously well on the after-retail market, and it's all due to those two magical words: Lucy Lawless.

The theory among fans is that if Lawless, star of TV's "Xena," were to quit tomorrow, the show would die a fiery ratings death. Perhaps for that reason, Toy Biz's Xena characters aside from Lawless have never been made in mass, but the few that have—as part of the Biz's Hercules line—are doing big business. Demand will probably be upped as Toy Biz ekes out a few more Xena figures, including dynamic and realistic new sculpts of Xena herself, gal pal Gabrielle and bad girl Callisto all set to hit toy shelves running in 1998. If demand warrants it, there may be even more.

In terms of the stuff that's already out there, keep your eye on the original Xena action figure and the 10-inch Deluxe Edition, which has posted the strongest gains. Not that most of you need an excuse to keep your eyes on Xena. Or at least parts of her. Hubba. TF

Back in Iowa, ToyFare Price Guide Manager Lars Pearson was once buried up to his knees in hog waste, and considers the incident "symbolic of his childhood."

HOW TO USE THE TOYFARE PRICE GUIDE

FIRST OFF...

The following 38-odd pages feature the ToyFare Price Guide, the most accurate and up-to-date action figure price guide in the known universe. To insure that it's the most bestest price guide available, we stay in contact with hundreds of retailers throughout the country and regularly send scouts to comic/sci-fi/toy shows to see what the it's buggers are selling for (and which ones are really selling).

But, even with working our fingers to the bone, do keep in mind that a price guide is just that, a GUIDE. Prices most definitely vary depending on local availability and popularity of a figure.

FINDING STUFF...

It's easy, unless you're a cantaloupe. The price guide is arranged alphabetically by toy lines. Listings for figures related to movie series (i.e. "The Empire Strikes Back"), are posted alphabetically under the original movie title ("Star Wars"). When a title has been used several times for a different line, like Star Wars: Power of the Force, we list all lines chronologically.

Skipping articles "A," "An," and "The" at the beginning of a title, alphabetization is word by word, not letter by letter. So, "The Mask" is listed under "Mask," and "The Tick" is listed under "Tick." "Star Trek: Starfleet Academy" comes before "Star Trek: The Next Generation" because we include the article "The" in alphabetizing when it appears as an interior word in the title. Using the one-word-at-a-time approach, all titles starting with the word "Super," including "Super Amigos," are used up before we go on to titles such as "Superman Animated Series." Abbreviations such as "Dr." will be found before titles starting with "Dragon" but after titles starting with "Doctor." Figures with names beginning with numerals—such as "2-18"—will appear at the top of each listing.

WHY TWO PRICES?

All first-column prices are values for unopened mint figures (MIP, or "Mint in Package"). Second-column prices are for loose mint figures (LM).

Of course, there are all sorts of grades in between, and if you're the anal type, we've diagrammed a few of them to help make things a little easier. Keep in mind this is only a guide, and percentages can vary depending on several factors, including age, supply and demand for the various grades, retailer location, local availability of a figure and its current popularity.

Any new figure that has just been released but hasn't been widely traded yet is marked with ••.

WHAT'S WHAT...

An annoyingly in-depth look at grading action figures:

NOTE! Always keep in mind that with unopened toys, it's possible for the toy to have one grade and the packaging another. If a toy's unopened, it's most likely mint, barring toys that were flawed during production. But the packaging might have the tar whipped out of it, and grade in good or fair condition. Many ads will stipulate this, such as "unopened figure in good packaging." There's basically no way we can tell you how to adjust for every grading split—you'll just have to go with your gut and reach an arrangement with the buyer/seller. Got it? Good. Power to da man.

MINT (MIP or "Mint in Package") Packaging: Absolutely perfect. No price tag, no bent corner, no minor crease, no nuthin'. This condition is so smegging amazing, it's scarcer than clothes on Madonna. Even new toys on the shelves aren't mint most of the time, so you might as well not worry about it. Stuff that is miraculously mint can fetch 125% to 150% of the MIP price depending on desirability and if it was made before 1990. Post-1990, it just fetches the MIP price. Figure: A perfect figure with no sign of usage. Must include every packaged accessory, all in perfect condition and working order. Can also fetch up to 125%-150% of MIP value—again, depending on desirability and if it was made pre-1990.

NEAR MINT (NM) Packaging: Just a notch or two below perfect. Tiny flaws may include a small tear or crease. Normally fetches 100% of the MIP value. Figure: Just about perfect. Minor smudge/color-flaking. All packaged accessories are present (minor smudge/color flaking acceptable) and in working order.

VERY FINE (VF) Packaging: Several minor tears/creases. Usually 75%-90% of MIP value. Figure: More pronounced smudge/color-flaking. All accessories are present with (possible) more pronounced smudges/flaking.

FINE (FN) Packaging: Multiple tears/creases of a more profound nature, possible corners missing/minor writing. Around 40%-50% of MIP value. Figure: Loose joints, heavy smudge/color flaking, may not contain any accessories.

VERY GOOD (VG) Packaging: Major crease/tears, large portions of packaging missing, significant writing/stains. You're looking at 15%-25% of MIP value. Figure: Major discolored areas, "wobbly" body parts, may not contain any accessories.

GOOD (G), FAIR (FR) AND POOR (P) Packaging: Heavily torn/creased/written on to the point of obscurity. Sells for about 5%-10% of the MIP value. Figure: Major discolored areas, excessively loose body parts, portions of figure may be missing (ponytail, capes, etc.), may not contain any accessories. ■

ToyFare PRICE GUIDE

The toys in this guide are priced as follows: Prices listed on the left are for mint in package (MIP), meaning that the toys have never been removed from their original packaging; items not in any packaging (loose) or missing any of their original accessories vary significantly and are generally worth the prices listed on the right. A listing marked with a •• means that particular figure has not been released yet from the manufacturer. In some cases, these figures are canceled, and thus, never released.

Remember, this is only a guide, and prices can vary for a variety of reasons, including local scarcity.

MUG SHOT

AMERICAN MAID

THE TICK (BANDAI)

FIRST APPEARANCE: "The Tick" episode "The Tick vs. The Idea Men"

ORIGIN: She's the most patriotic domestic and one of the toughest gals you'll ever meet. American Maid, decked out in her stars-and-stripes French maid outfit, is a top-notch gymnast and one of the Tick's frequent partners. American Maid can choose to either throw her shoes or kick them off her feet, and can also lob her razor-sharp tiara at her foes. Apparently, American Maid and Elle Fiddlemass had a thing a while ago, but now they kicker incessantly whenever they're in the same room.

CURRENT STATUS: When you're not watching "Sesame Park," check out reruns of "The Tick" on Comedy Central.

RET MINERT: "The Tick vs. Proto-Clown." American Maid is rendered shoeless after her heels fail to take down Proto-Clown.

ATTUMA

FANTASTIC FOUR (TOY BIZ)

FIRST APPEARANCE: Fantastic Four #53 (December 1964)

ORIGIN: Attuma is a member of the race of Homo mariners, blue-skinned people who live deeper underwater and breathe through gills. He learned of a prophecy of a conqueror who would brutally take over the sea kingdom of Atlantis. Naturally, being the self-centered barbarian that he is, Attuma believed himself to be that conqueror, so he set out on numerous occasions to invade Atlantis and kill Namor, occasional ruler of Atlantis. While most of his schemes met with failure, Attuma is responsible for the death of Namor's bride, Lady Dorma.

CURRENT STATUS: When he was last seen, Attuma was beaten and left for dead in the middle of the ocean. Or something.

KEY MOMENT: Sub-Mariner #4, Namor is captured and forced to throw down with Attuma in hand-to-hand combat.

BLACK BOLT

FANTASTIC FOUR (TOY BIZ)

FIRST APPEARANCE: Fantastic Four #45 (December 1965)

ORIGIN: Black Bolt was forced to live a life of silence because the slightest whisper from his mouth will unleash his devastating sonic powers. He was exposed to the mutagenic Terrigen Mist as an infant, and was raised in a sound-proof chamber until he learned to control his abilities. That's gotta suck. He later learned his brother Maximus was scheming with the alien Hree. He unleashed his sonic powers to knock a Kree spacecraft out of the sky, but the ship inadvertently crashed into his parents' laboratory, killing them both. Bummer.

CURRENT STATUS: Baby was last seen shakin' his Black Bolt thang in the Heroes Return universe.

KEY MOMENT: Fantastic Four #248. Faced with the lethal effects of the Earth's impure air, Black Bolt and the rest of the Inhumans are forced to move their home from Attilan to the Blue Area of the moon.

DOOMSDAY
SUPERMAN: MAN OF STEEL (KENNER)

FIRST APPEARANCE: Superman: Man of Steel #17 (Nov. 1992)
ORIGIN: Thousands of years ago on the planet Krypton, the elites Bertron conducted experiments to create the perfect being. By repeatedly injecting an engineered infant into the planet's harsh atmosphere and cloning from its dead body, Bertron and his team were able to speed up evolution. They created a being that is virtually indestructible. Doomsday was unstoppable and he was seemingly destroyed by the Radiant, a pure energy being created by the inhabitants of Colatron, and his body was shot into deep space. He eventually crash-landed on Earth, where he set out to destroy the one thing that reminds him of his humble creation—Superman.
CURRENT STATUS: Doomsday's stuck at the end of time.
KEY MOVES: Superman/Doomsday: Hunter/Prey. Superman travels to Apokolips to confront Doomsday as the creature's origin is revealed.

MUG SHOT

HAWKMAN
BATMAN: TOTAL JUSTICE (KENNER)

FIRST APPEARANCE: Brave and the Bold #34 (March 1961)
ORIGIN: Katar Hol is a resident of Thanagar, a ruthlessly imperialistic planet that relegates its lower classes to the seedy ghettos of Downside. His father, Paran Katar, invented artificial wings and the 4th anti-gravity metal that gave the planet's police, the Wingman, the ability to fly. Hol became a Wingman, but was exiled after he unknowingly killed his own father through the treacherous schemes of Byth, a corrupt Wingman. As his exile drew to a close, Katar Hol was contacted by Shayera Thal, a Wingman who helped him expose Byth's evil conspiracies. Hol and Thal followed Byth to Earth, and became known as Hawkman and Hawkwoman.
CURRENT STATUS: Hawkie's been in limbo following Zero Hour, probably waiting for yet another relaunch.
KEY MOMENT: Hawkworld: Tim Truman's reinitialization of Hawkman stands as one of the Thanagarian's finest moments.

KRAVEN
SPIDER-MAN ANIMATED SERIES (TOY BIZ)

FIRST APPEARANCE: Amazing Spider-Man #15 (August 1964)
ORIGIN: Sergei Kravinoff was orphaned at an early age and forced to live by his own wits. While on safari in Africa, he stoke an herbal potion that granted superhuman strength and abilities. Kravinoff was already a skilled hunter, and he used his newly enhanced talents to take on some of the deadliest animals in the wild in hand-to-hand combat. After being contacted by the villainous Chameleon, Kraven traveled to America to hunt Spider-Man. Using a variety of primitive weapons and poisons, as well as his superior hunting abilities, Kraven proved to be one of the arch-crawler's deadliest foes.
CURRENT STATUS: The original Kraven is dead, but his son has taken up the mantle to make things kooky for Spidey.
KEY MOMENT: Amazing Spider-Man: Fearful Symmetry—Kraven's Last Hunt. This moody and poetic story features Kraven's dark scheme to finally beat Spidey.

LEADER

INCREDIBLE HULK (TOY BIZ)

FIRST APPEARANCE: Tales to Astonish #62 (December 1964)

ORIGIN: Much like Bruce Banner (a.k.a. the Hulk), high school dropout Samuel Sterns was caught in a freak accident when a cylinder of nuclear waste he was disposing exploded. Sterns survived, and while in the hospital, he began to notice that he had become more intelligent. He awoke several weeks after the accident and found his skin had turned green and his cranium had mutated to five times its normal size. What's a guy with a big noggin and a vomitous complexion to do? Take over the world, that's what! Calling himself the Leader, Sterns set out to do just that.

CURRENT STATUS: The Leader is dead. Or maybe he isn't. Who knows with this guy? He's weird.

KEY MOMENT: Incredible Hulk #182–#345. The Leader's new, more mutated form is revealed as he dispatches a bunch of baddies to take on the Hulk.

LUCIFER

BATTLESTAR GALACTICA (MATTEL)

FIRST APPEARANCE: "Battlestar Galactica" premiere episode "Saga of a Star World" (Sept. 17, 1978)

ORIGIN: Lucifer is an IL-series Cylon, programmed to be more intelligent and analytical than the other Cylon Centurion models. This trait, pinned more to the advisor and chief aide to the Imperious Leader, who also happens to be an IL-series. Presumably, Lucifer's devious nature and his status as one of the few Cylons with reasoning abilities allowed him to work his way through the ranks to his level of authority around the Leader.

CURRENT STATUS: "Battlestar Galactica" reruns show up sometimes on the Sci-Fi Channel. Or you can go out and buy a selection of old episodes on video.

KEY MOMENT: This guy is merely an annoying toadie. On a good day, he spends all his time sucking up to the Imperious Leader. On a bad day, he spends all his time sucking up to the Imperious Leader.

MR. MXYZPTLK
WORLD'S GREATEST SUPER-HEROES! (MEGO)

FIRST APPEARANCE: Superman #30 (Best series—Sept. 1964)
REVIEW: The impish Mr. Mxyzptlk is a major thorn in the side of Superman, proving yet again that the Man of Steel has a rogues gallery made of six. This derby-wearin' bastard from the fifth dimension enjoys coming to our world to play tricks and throw everything into utter chaos. That's all he does. The big 'M uses magical powers that are derived from advanced fifth-dimensional science that is beyond the range of human understanding. He can do just about anything with his powers, but mostly he just uses them to annoy Superman to no end. What a waste.
CURRENT STATUS: Mxyzptlk will be returning soon to plague Superman and the JLA.
KEY MOMENT: The Superman/Madman Bibliobalad #1–#3. Guess who's behind Sway City's Madman running into the Man of Steel?

MUG SHOT

MR. MXYZPTLK

WORLD'S GREATEST SUPER-HERMES! (MEGA)

FIRST APPEARANCE: Superman #38 (first series—Sept. 1944)
ORIGIN: The impish Mr. Mxyzptlk is a major them in the side of Superman, proving yet again that the Man of Steel has a rogues gallery made of tin. This derby-wearin' bastard from the fifth dimension enjoys coming to our world to play tricks and throw everything into utter chaos. That's all he does. The big 8 uses magical powers that are derived from advanced fifth-dimensional science that is beyond the range of human understanding. He can do just about anything with his powers, but mostly he just uses them to annoy Superman to no end. What a waste.
CURRENT STATUS: Mxyzptlk will be returning soon to plague Superman and the JLA.
KEY MOMENT: The Superman/Hoolman Hullabaloo! #1-#3. Guess who's behind Snap City's Hoolman running into the Man of Steel?

MR. MXYZPTLK

WORLD'S GREATEST SUPER-HERO(ES) (MEGO)

FIRST APPEARANCE: Superman #38 (first series—Sept. 1944)

EDITOR: The impish Mr. Mxyzptlk is a major thorn in the side of Superman, proving yet again that the Man of Steel has a rogues gallery made of tin. This derby-wearin' bastard from the fifth dimension enjoys coming to our world to play tricks and throw everything into utter chaos. That's all he does. The Big H uses magical powers that are derived from advanced fifth-dimensional science that is beyond the range of human understanding. He can do just about anything with his powers, but mostly he just uses them to annoy Superman to no end. What a waste.

CURRENT STATUS: Mxyzptlk will be returning soon in plague Superman and the JLA.

KEY MOMENT: The Superman/Hoolman Rollaboloo! #1–#3. Guess who's behind Snap City's Hoolman running into the Man of Steel?

MR. MXYZPTLK

WORLD'S GREATEST SUPER-HERESY (MEGO)

FIRST APPEARANCE: Superman #130 (first series—Sept. 1964)

ORIGIN: The impish Mr. Mxyzptlk is a major thorn in the side of Superman, proving yet again that the Man of Steel has a rogues gallery made of tin. This derby-wearin' bastard from the fifth dimension enjoys coming to our world to play tricks and throw everything into utter chaos. That's all he does. The Big N uses magical powers that are derived from advanced fifth-dimensional science that is beyond the range of human understanding. He can do just about anything with his powers, but mostly he just uses them to annoy Superman to no end. What a waste.

CURRENT STATUS: Mxyzptlk will be returning soon to plague Superman and the JLA.

KEY MOMENT: The Supermen/Phantom Nullifier! #1-#3. Guess who's behind Snap City's Hookman running into the Man of Steel?

MR. MXYZPTLK

FIRST APPEARANCE: Superman #38 (Best series—Sept. 1944)
ORIGIN: The impish Mr. Mxyzptlk is a major thorn in the side of Superman, proving yet again that the Man of Steel has a rogues gallery made of tin. This derby-wearin' bastard from the fifth dimension enjoys coming to our world to play tricks and throw everything into utter chaos. That's all he does. The Big H uses magical powers that from advanced fifth-dimensional that is beyond the range of human understanding. He can do just about anything with his powers, but mostly he just uses them to annoy Superman to no end. What a waste.
CURRENT STATUS: Mxyzptlk will be returning soon to plague Superman and the JLA.
KEY MOMENT: The Superman/Hoolman Ballabalooz! #3-#3. Guess who's behind Snap City's Hoolman running into the Man of Steel?

MR. MXYZPTLK

WORLD'S GREATEST SUPER-HEROES! (MEGO)

FIRST APPEARANCE: Superman #130 (first series—Sept. 1984)

ORIGIN: The impish Mr. Mxyzptlk is a major thorn in the side of Superman, proving yet again that the Man of Steel has a rogues gallery made of tin. This derby-wearing bastard from the fifth dimension enjoys coming to our world to play tricks and throw everything into utter chaos. That's all he does. The Big H uses magical powers that are derived from advanced fifth-dimensional science that is beyond the range of human understanding. He can do just about anything with his powers, but mostly he just uses them to annoy Superman to no end.

What a waste.

CURRENT STATUS: Mxyzptlk will be returning soon to plague Superman and the JLA.

KEY MOMENT: The Superman/Madman Bulletabout #1–#3. Guess who's behind Snap City's Madman running into the Man of Steel?

damn...is he dead?

ToyFare PRICE GUIDE

Beanie Babies

Welcome to the Beanie Baby price guide—your up-to-date listing of those plush, squishy little animal critters produced by Ty.

For those who've been out of the loop, Beanie Babies have been a buying fad across America for some months now. Often, the toys are bought by collectors, who snatch up a Beanie as soon as it retires in the hopes of it seeing a price increase. The remainders are bought by people who think the toys look darn cute.

Keep in mind, there are a lot of Beanie copycats out there, so always go by the Ty label if you wanna know if you're holding a genuine Beanie. Also be aware if you're a collector that the Beanies weren't built to last throughout eternity—meaning you gotta look 'em over before you buy—and they're worth dramatically less if the tag is missing. Got it? Ready...break!

BEANIE PRICES

NOTE: On current Beanie Babies with old swing tags, add $10-15. Beanies with no tag are worth 50% less than price shown. An (R) indicates this Beanie has been "retired."

TOYING AROUND

Walter Simonson
Writer/Artist

A DISTANT ECHO...

Do toys mold the imagination?

I'll get back to this one in a second. But let's start with a different, more personal question first.

So…how old am I?

I'm so old that when I was kid, we didn't have action figures. We had to tie sticks together with weeds to make armatures and then slap mud on them to sculpt our heroes and villains! The closest we could get to giving our mud men nuclear vaporizers was a paper clip. And since we all lived in stone huts, we had to play on the rough flagstones without kneepads or elbow protection which is how come all the guys my age are only three feet tall. We sanded our legs off playing on the rocks. Hey, what can I say? It was the old days!

But really, only the first sentence in the above paragraph is true.

Hard as it may be to believe now, in an age of zillions of action figures—to say nothing of an entire magazine devoted to them—there really were no action figures back when I was a kid. What we had instead were whole armies of little plastic soldiers. Which meant for about the cost of one special McFarlane toy today, we got to fight entire wars with soldiers, planes, off-road vehicles, tanks and occasionally, even vacu-formed landscapes!

Of course, the quality of the sculpting of the figures often left something to be desired whereas the quality of some of the work being done today is nothing short of art. But entire armies could still be fun.

A company named Marx put out a number of sets of toy soldiers back then. My brother and I had the set of modern G.I.s, complete with a machine gun that was spring loaded to fire small plastic projectiles (a no-no today), two planes for additional ground support (a Chance Vought Cutlass and a Banshee), and a metal building that could be slotted together to form the Army HQ.

Once the soldier game had begun, there always seemed to be a certain protocol that each battle followed, almost without deliberate plan. Somehow, virtually every war was fought to the last man, literally. This guy would nail that guy, he would be nailed in turn, and the two sides would go down, one after another, until only a single survivor on the winning side remained.

Good battle damage was also a problem. The metal HQ didn't really collapse at all satisfactorily because it was only made of four or five pieces. When you pulled it apart, it became flat boring pieces of metal lying on the rug. But we did have wooden bricks that made buildings and bridges, and they could be exploded into a thousand fragments in a most satisfying fashion. So we built bridges and buildings and walls and towers for battle after battle and fought great wars across the constructed landscapes of our imaginations.

Which brings me back to my original question. Do toys mold the imagination? Somehow, in comics, I always seem to end up drawing tales of armies—thousands of warriors fighting for victory in galactic settings with vast perspectives and gargantuan weaponries. Is this the direction in which my own imagination was bent by directing the course of entire armies?

And what does this suggest about the artists of more recent generations than mine? Those for whom hoards of small plastic figures no longer were the norm. Will the comic book artists who had a few action figures to play with as children draw comics with a few big figures charging into the camera lens in tight focus without backgrounds? Tightly rendered in echo of the larger and more detailed figures of more recent toys? Who can truly say?

But I do believe, in my secret heart, playing with toy soldiers helped to stimulate and maybe even expand the imagination of the child I was when I was creating my fictional histories. And if we are shaped among other things by the toys we play with, perhaps if we look carefully, we can see the shapes of our toys in the work we do as adults.

Or perhaps not! TF

When not gracing the pages of DC Comics' Jack Kirby's Fourth World and Michael Moorcock's Multiverse, comics veteran Walter Simonson can be found lying on his living room floor re-fighting the Battle of Pork Chop Hill.
